

Blow – Fill – Sealing Process Steps

Mold Creation: The machine starts by creating a mold, which consists of two halves that form the shape of the container.

Blowing: Compressed air is blown into the mold, causing the plastic to expand and conform to the shape of the container.

Filling: Once the container is formed, it moves to the filling station. Here, the open end of the container is positioned under the filling nozzle and filled with solution.

Sealing: After the container is filled, the open end is sealed to create a hermetically sealed package. The sealing process may involve various techniques such as heat sealing, ultrasonic sealing, or applying a pre-formed cap or closure.
