Developing Teachers Developing Schools Making Inset Effective For The School:

Developing Teachers, Developing Schools Howard Bradley, Colin Conner, Geoff Southworth, 2026-05 School development and staff development are fundamentally interdependent First published in 1994 Developing Teachers Developing Schools presents a comprehensive examination of how In Service Education and Training INSET was being utilized to enhance school performance and support individual teacher growth during the educational reforms of the early 1990s The University of Cambridge Institute of Education had been at the forefront of this transformation advocating the development of reflective teachers as the key to quality improvement in children s education This book distils the experience of some of the brightest educators working within that constantly evolving environment of the 1990s Reflecting on their work and charting the path forward for their era they offered both enthusiasm and practical guidance to a profession that was being demoralized by the politicization of education sustained media hostility and the relentless pace of educational change characterizing that turbulent period

Professional Learning as Relational Practice Jenny Reeves, 2010-04-07 Given the emphasis on transforming professional work through the adoption of enquiry based and trans disciplinary approaches to service development there is an urgent need for those involved in professional education to develop a robust understanding of how changes in practice occur A more inclusive approach to the analysis of the processes involved across the varied and interrelated contexts in which they occur is thus very timely In this book Jenny Reeves sets out to explore the gap between the experience of professional learning as an interactive dynamic and socially contextualised process and descriptions that are often individualistic overly linear and largely context free She makes the claim that this disjuncture is the outcome of modes of enquiry that concentrate on limited selections of the available data Adopting a relational approach to describing practice based professional development including graphical means for exploring the spaces produced by the activity provides a very different picture It creates a basis for representing the complex movements relationships and interactions between people and things that occur during professional learning It also provides a productive approach to describing the exchange and creation of professional knowledge across different contexts over time By building a picture of the ephemeral spaces and connections that educating activities produce mapping relational space allows those engaged in professional education to think rather differently about how professional learning and changes in knowledge and practice may be understood supported and developed
