

Spatial analysis of poverty: Combining geospatial data and survey data to study regional inequality in Ghana

Tomomi Tanaka (World Bank)
Jia Jun Lee (World Bank)

Abstract

This study combines district level poverty rates, population census data, income data, and geospatial data to investigate how human capital, structural change, infrastructure, and environmental degradation impacted poverty and employment in Ghana. We find that poverty reduction was primarily achieved through increased share of working age population, employment rates and income in the service sector, shift of labor from agriculture to the service sector, expansion of access to electricity, and increased rainfall. Further, the paper investigates the factors that have affected changes in agricultural income and shift of labor from agriculture to industry and services. Soil erosion had a large impact on the changes in agricultural income. Improved access to electricity, road, and market was crucial for creating jobs in non-agricultural sectors. In areas where droughts are severe, more people became engaged in agriculture and less in industry and services. It may be because severe droughts prevent people from investing in non-agricultural sectors. The results of this study suggest that for Ghana to reduce poverty and create jobs in non-agricultural sectors in lagging areas, it needs to invest in infrastructure, and take actions to mitigate damages from soil degradation and droughts.

The Development Gap John Peter Cole,1981 A Global Strategy for Housing in the Third Millennium W.A. Allen,R.G. Courtney,E. Happold,A.M. Wood,2005-09-20 This book outlines the emerging determinants in a global context for the provision of housing for the growing shifting and changing populations In doing so the reader will be encouraged to foresee the complementary evolution in the planning design and construction of housing in the developed and developing world Applications of the Expansion Method Emilio Casetti,John Paul Jones III,1991-12-05 First published in 2004 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company The Third World Jim Norwine,Alfonso Gonzalez,1988 This book aims to present an impressionistic picture that reflects the heterogeneous nature of the Third World Contributions from Western and Third World authors illustrate the complex reality of problems and issues using case studies from the Caribbean South America the Arab countries Asia and Africa The Geography of Underdevelopment Dean Forbes,2010-11-26 First published in 1984 this title discusses the emergence of both the orthodox and political economy based approaches to underdevelopment in geography critically assessing their strengths and weaknesses and showing the relationship between intellectual developments and changing material conditions The work is primarily concerned with theories though it does contain much empirical material drawn from throughout the Third World The book examines the emergence of theories of development historically and considers the various contemporary theoretical schools both Marxist and non Marxist It goes on to consider four aspects of development which are of particular interest to geographers namely the world economy regional imbalances the human nature theme and the analysis of urban space and concludes by suggesting some directions for future research Review - Fernand Braudel Center for the Study of Economies, Historical Systems, and Civilizations Fernand Braudel Center for the Study of Economies, Historical Systems, and Civilizations,1988 Challenges of Globalization and Prospects for an Inter-civilizational World Order Ino Rossi,2020-11-24 This is a must read volume on globalization in which some of the foremost scholars in the field discuss the latest issues Truly providing a global perspective it includes authorship and discussions from the Global North and South and covers the major facets of globalization cultural economic ecological and political It discusses the historical developments in governance preceding globalization the diverse theoretical and methodological approaches to globalization and analyzes underdevelopment anti globalization movements global poverty global inequality and the debates on international trade versus protectionism Finally the volume looks to the future and provides prospects for inter civilizational understanding rapprochement and global cooperation This will be of great interest to academics and students of sociology social anthropology political science and international relations economics social policy social history as well as to policy makers Contractual Communities in the Self-Organising City Grazia Brunetta,Stefano Moroni,2012-01-04 Both land use regulation and territorial collective services have traditionally been accomplished in cities through coercive efforts of public administrations Recently land use regulation and collective service provision regimes have emerged within contractual communities territory based organisations usually but not exclusively residential such as homeowners associations This book examines the problems and opportunities of contractual communities avoiding both the alarmism and unwarranted apologies found in much of the literature on contractual communities The central notion is that cases in which coercive action by a public agency was deemed indispensable have been unjustly overstated while the potential benefits of voluntary self organising processes have been seriously understated The authors propose a revised notion of the state role that allows ample leeway for contractual communities of all forms
