Towards a Theory of Epistemically Significant Perception Nadja El Kassar, 2015-09-25 How does perceptual experience make us knowledgeable about the world In this book Nadja El Kassar argues that an informed answer requires a novel theory of perception perceptual experience involves conceptual capacities and consists in a relation between a perceiver and the world Contemporary theories of perception disagree about the role of content and conceptual capacities in perceptual experience In her analysis El Kassar scrutinizes the arguments of conceptualist and relationist theories thereby exposing their limitations for explaining the epistemic role of perceptual experience Against this background she develops her novel theory of epistemically significant perception Her theory improves on current accounts by encompassing both the epistemic role of perceptual experiences and its perceptual character Central claims of her theory receive additional support from work in vision science making this book an original contribution to the philosophy of perception

Simplification, Explication and Normalization Margherita Ippolito, 2014-09-18 The search for general laws and regularities in Translation Studies gained new momentum in the 1990s when Baker 1993 promoted the use of large electronic corpora as research tools for exploring the linguistic features that render the language of translation different from the language of non translated texts By comparing a corpus of translated and non translated English texts Baker and her research team put forward the hypothesis that translated texts are characterized by some universal features namely simplification explication normalization and levelling out The purpose of this study is to test whether simplification explication and normalization apply to Italian translations of children s books In order to achieve this aim a comparable corpus of translated and non translated works of classic fiction for children has been collected and analysed using Corpus Linguistics tools and methodologies The results show that in the translational subcorpus simplification explication and normalization processes do not prevail over the non translational one Therefore it is suggested that the status of translated children s literature in the Italian literary polysystem Even Zohar 1979 1990 and from a general viewpoint all the cultural historical and social conditions that influence translators activities determine translation choices that can also tend towards processes different from those proposed by Baker
