

The Tenth

From "Tales of the West" by Stewart Udall

He had been riding horses for ten years, and "Tales of the West" was the first book he had ever read. He had read the papers and the magazines, but he had never read a book.

It was a long, long book, but he had read it. He had read it all the way through, and he had learned a great deal. He had learned that the West was a big, big place, and that there were many things to be learned from it. He had learned that the West was a place of opportunity, and that there were many things to be learned from it.

He had learned that the West was a place of opportunity, and that there were many things to be learned from it. He had learned that the West was a place of opportunity, and that there were many things to be learned from it.

When the West became civilized, it was a long, long time ago. It was a long, long time ago, and it was a long, long time ago.
