Re-Collecting Black Hawk Nicholas Brown, Sarah E. Kanouse, 2015-06-04 The name Black Hawk permeates the built environment in the upper Midwestern United States It has been appropriated for everything from fitness clubs to used car dealerships Makataimeshekiakiak the Sauk Indian war leader whose name loosely translates to Black Hawk surrendered in 1832 after hundreds of his fellow tribal members were slaughtered at the Bad Axe Massacre Re-Collecting Black Hawk examines the phenomena of this appropriation in the physical landscape and the deeply rooted sentiments it evokes among Native Americans and descendants of European settlers Nearly 170 original photographs are presented and juxtaposed with texts that reveal and complicate the significance of the imagery Contributors include tribal officials scholars activists and others such as George Thurman the principal chief of the Sac and Fox Nation and a direct descendant of Black Hawk These image text encounters offer visions of both the past and present and the shaping of memory through landscapes that reach beyond their material presence into spaces of cultural and political power As we witness the evocation of Black Hawk serves as a painful reminder a forced deference and a veiled attempt to wipe away the guilt of past atrocities Re-Collecting Black Hawk also points toward the future By simultaneously unsettling and reconstructing the Midwestern landscape Re-Collecting Black Hawk envisions new modes of peace benevolent course of policy was never adopted Between the Black Hawk War of 1832 and the Wounded Knee Massacre of 1890 numerous wars campaigns and massacres took place west of the Mississippi Benjamin Drake first published this excellent history on Black Hawk and the war named after him just six years after that war ended This new edition which marks the 175th anniversary of the Black Hawk War reproduces the 1856 edition of Drake s book retaining the original punctuation but modernizing the spelling
