Black Shawl Poems:

Black Shawl Kathryn Stripling Byer, 1998-03-01 Black Shawl emanates from Kathryn Stripling Byer's fascination with female ballad singers in southern Appalachia whose voices haunt the mountains still and from the image of a black net or shawl being dragged over the ground plumbing the depths collecting bits and fragments of a woman's life. The singers and storytellers of this splendid collection are struggling to answer the query of the book's epigraph: "What will you make of this?" The first section, Voices, offers a variety of female perspectives: those of mothers, daughters, sisters, lovers. These women are singing the old songs and waiting for their lives to change. Blood Mountain, the second part, experiments with ballad conventions and the mysteries of mythmaking: one story's good as another so long as there's blood in it. Delphia, a quilter and teacher who narrates the third section of Black Shawl, epitomizes these mountain women: the very ones who became the Keepers of the Ballads, the repositories and who passed down their knowledge. Through the remarkable mountain women of Black Shawl, Byer portrays the singers once mute, finding their place weaving a thread in the web of their existence and its endlessly evolving pattern.

Six Poets from the Mountain South John Lang, 2010-04-20 In the most extensive work to date on major poets from the mountain South, John Lang takes as his point of departure an oft-quoted remark by Jim Wayne Miller: "Appalachian literature is and has always been as decidedly worldly, secular, and profane in its outlook as the region's traditional religion appears to be spiritual and otherworldly." Although this statement may be accurate for Miller's own poetry and fiction, Lang maintains that it does not do justice to the pervasive religious and spiritual concerns of many of the mountain South's finest writers, including the five other leading poets whose work he analyzes along with Miller's: Fred Chappell, Robert Morgan, Jeff Daniel, Marion, Kathryn Stripling Byer, and Charles Wright. Lang demonstrates all write poetry that explores, sometimes with widely varying results, what they see as the undeniable presence of the divine within the temporal world. Like Blake and Emerson before them, these poets find the supernatural within nature rather than beyond it. They all exhibit a love of place in their poems, a strong sense of connection to nature and the land, especially the mountains. Yet while their affirmation of the world before them suggests a resistance to the otherworldliness that Miller points to, their poetry is nonetheless permeated with spiritual questing. Dante strongly influences both Chappell and Wright, though the latter eventually resigns himself to being simply a God-fearing agnostic, whereas Chappell follows Dante in celebrating the love that moves the sun and other stars. Byer, probably the least orthodox of these poets, chooses to lay up treasures on earth, rejecting the transcendent in favor of a Native American spirituality of immanence, while Morgan and Marion find in nature what Marion calls a vocabulary of wonders akin to Emerson's conviction that nature is the language of the spiritual. Employing close readings of the poets' work and relating it to British and American Romanticism as well as contemporary eco-theology and eco-criticism, Lang's book is the most ambitious and searching foray yet into the worlds of these renowned post-World War II Appalachian poets.
