Television Policies of the Labour Party 1951-2001 Des Freedman, 2004-08-02 Des Freedman explores

Labour's divided response to the development of commercial television in the 1950s and assesses the impact of Wilson's governments on television in the 1960s. His key argument is that Labour has always been a vigorous but ultimately unreliable advocate of television.

Television Under the Tories Peter Goodwin, 1998-09 British television has always carried special international significance in its early years it was regarded as the model of public service broadcasting. However with the advent of a Conservative government in 1979 and the rapid development of new technologies broadcasting policy was subjected to a wide range of fundamental changes. Market liberalism with Margaret Thatcher as its most visible personification has since transformed the global landscape of broadcasting. This text examines the particular impact made by the Thatcher and Major administrations on the British television industry one of only a handful that have had successful ambitions in challenging the dominance of US programming in the global marketplace. This authoritative study should be of value to scholars and students of international communications, TV and government policy. It is an accessible and concise account of changes in one of the world's most distinctive and highly regarded television industries.

Television Richard Collins, 2005-08-12 In this important and wide ranging text Richard Collins combines original research with provocative analysis and argument. He focuses on the impact of new television technologies, national policies for television in North America and Europe, the effects of internationalisation, television news and documentaries and the history and likely development of media studies.

Television Policy Bob Franklin, 2019-07-30 Television Policy offers a unique and authoritative account of the major developments in television programming and policy since 1976 by collecting in a single volume the MacTaggart lectures delivered at the Edinburgh International Television Festival across the last quarter of a century. The MacTaggart lecturers include the most celebrated and distinguished programme makers, producers, performers, playwrights, policymakers and senior media executives across all sectors of broadcasting. They include Greg Dyke, John Humphrys, John McGrath, Marcel Ophuls, Norman Lear, Jeremy Isaacs, John Mortimer, Peter Jay, Ted Turner, Jonathan Miller, Denis Foreman, John Schlesinger, Troy Kennedy Martin, Philip Whitehead, Christine Ockrent, Rupert Murdoch, Verity Lambert, David Elstein, Michael Grade, Dennis Potter, Janet Street Porter, John Birt, Laurence Marks, Maurice Gran, Peter Bazalgette, Richard Eyre, David Liddiment and Mark Thompson. With a Foreword by John Willis and an introductory essay exploring the history of the MacTaggart lectures and a review of the shifting themes and concerns of the lectures, the book provides a forum for the significant debates which have helped to shape both television content and policy across twenty five years of considerable and unprecedented change in broadcasting. Topics covered include the future of public service programming, the relationship of government to broadcasters, the impact of ownership on the freedom of broadcasters and debates about whether and how television should be regulated. Television Policy is essential reading for all students of media and communication studies as well as those interested in reading accounts of television programming and policy written by some of the most eloquent, eminent but contentious figures in television broadcasting. Features: The first collection of the
