Cable Tv Regulation Or Competition:

Cable TV Robert W. Crandall, Harold Furchtgott-Roth, 2010-12-01 In 1984 Congress simultaneously eliminated state local regulation of cable television rates and banned telephone companies from offering cable service in their own franchise areas Five years later the General Accounting Office discovered that basic cable rates had risen more than four times as rapidly as the overall consumer price level since rate deregulation As a result Congress began to move to reimpose cable rate regulation once again finally succeeding over President Bush s veto in 1992 In this book Robert Crandall and Harold Furchtgott Roth examine the case of reregulating cable television and find that viewers gained far more than they lost during the brief deregulatory era because cable services expanded so rapidly in the deregulated environment Moreover they show that new technologies such as direct broadcast satellites are likely to provide considerable market discipline for cable operators in the next few years weakening any case for rate regulation Given regulation s history of impeding innovation they conclude that economic welfare is more likely to be enhanced by policies aimed at encouraging new entry into video services than by rate regulation

Cable TV Robert W. Crandall, Harold W. Furchtgott-Roth, 1996 This book examines the case of reregulating cable television and shows that viewers gained far more than they lost during the brief deregulatory era because cable services expanded so rapidly in the deregulated environment

Telephone Company Entry Into Cable Television Leland L. Johnson, 1992 This study explores the potential consequences of recent decisions by the Federal Communications Commission to permit local telephone companies to compete with cable television operators and other video suppliers in providing video service The goal of the study is to provide inputs useful to policymakers in their continuing deliberations about the rules under which telephone companies should be permitted to participate in a video marketplace characterized by striking technological advances rapidly evolving market structures and changing social needs The report focuses on the likely consequences of the FCC decision and the recommendation that local exchange carriers LECs be permitted to go beyond provision of video dial tone It is especially concerned with the prospects for competition with cable operators the role for existing or new regulatory safeguards and issues of public policy To explore the potential for competition the study describes four scenarios involving a hypothetical LEC and a hypothetical cable company operating in the LEC s territory The scenarios set later in this decade and into the next century describe how the two entities behave in response to alternative regulatory economic and technological conditions

Toward Competition in Cable Television Leland L. Johnson, 1994 The American Enterprise Institute s Studies in Telecommunications Deregulation present new research on telecommunications policy with particular emphasis on reforms of federal and state regulatory policies that will advance rather than inhibit innovation and consumer welfare AEI has commissioned more than twenty five distinguished experts in law economics and engineering to write monographs on regulatory issues in telephony cable television broadcasting information services and other communications technologies The monographs are written and edited to be immediately useful to legislators jurists and public officials at all levels of government as well as to business executives and consumers who must live with these policies As such the monographs will also find a place in courses on regulated industries and communications policy in economics and communications departments and in business law and public policy schools

Testing the Effectiveness of Regulation and Competition on Cable Television Rates Mary T. Kelly,John S. Ying,2013 Cable Television Regulation United States. Congress. House. Committee on Energy and Commerce. Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance,1992 Video Media Competition Eli M. Pitsch,1998 Cable Television Regulation ,1982 An Introductory Guide to EC Competition Law and Practice Valentine Korah,1994 Public Policy Toward Cable Television Thomas W. Hazlett,Matthew Laurence Spitzer,1997 This study of cable rate regulation finds that unregulated monopoly may be superior to regulate monopoly even in the presence of legal entry barriers By comparing how rates quality and volume changed during the periods of deregulation and reregulation in the cable industry the authors show that cable rate regulation deals with a real problem monopoly power in local cable markets but has typically proven perverse in effect

Regulating Cable Television Rates Thomas W. Hazlett,1994 Cable TV Franchises as Barriers to Video Competition Thomas W. Hazlett,2020 Traditionally municipal cable TV franchises were advanced as consumer protection to counter natural monopoly video providers Yet historical evidence has demonstrated that franchise regulation fraught with conflicts and delays while ultimately proving ineffective in constraining rates failed to improve consumer welfare Now marketplace changes render even this weak traditional case moot First local rate controls are since the 1996 Telecommunications Act pre empted by federal law Second video rivalry has proven viable with inter modal competition from satellite TV and local exchange carriers LECs offering triple play services Third a community s interest in protecting local rights of way from excessive or disruptive use best achieved through generic liability rules are already in force for LEC video entrants under the terms of their telephone licenses For these new rivals which exploit scope efficiencies in entering video markets cable franchises do not establish parity but duplicate existing regulation Indeed cable operators entered voice and data markets via video franchises avoiding regulatory burdens such as build out requirements Eliminating the double taxation of overlapping regulatory structures improves economic efficiency by reducing a substantial barrier to competition Were head to head wireline video rivalry now offered to just under five percent of U S households to extend nationwide annual benefits to consumers are estimated to approximate 9 billion with overall economic welfare increasing about 3 billion per year

Telephone Company and Cable Television Competition Stuart N. Brotman,1990 A discussion of key technical economic legal and policy issues This book covers the telco cable television competitions and provides an historical context as well as coverage of the latest developments A New Guide to Federal Cable Television Regulations Steven R. Rivkin,1978 A New Guide to Federal Cable Television Regulations revisits and updates Rivkin s Cable Television A Guide to Federal Regulations from 1972 now that some five years of elaboration and fine tuning in government controls have elapsed Rivkin examines how these rules and regulations have fared in actual practice and details the subsequent changes that have been made in them as a result of citizen and industry feedback over the period This text makes full use of the thousands of certifications granted by the FCC and a like number of interpretive proceedings it has held to resolve and refine disputed and ambiguous points A significant feature of the new book is the material it contains on the expected impact of the new copyright law pertinent to cable television that becomes effective January 1 1978 Broadcasting and Cable Television Regulatory Handbook Peter S.
