When multiple forces act on an object, they combine to produce a net force, which determines whether the object speeds up, slows down, or changes direction. Understanding how forces act together is essential to explaining various observations from a physics world, such as a ball's trajectory or a car's acceleration. Newton's second law of motion states that the acceleration of an object is directly proportional to the net force acting on it and inversely proportional to its mass. This means that if the net force increases, the acceleration increases proportionally, but if the mass increases, the acceleration decreases. For example, pushing a heavy box with a small force will result in a small acceleration, while pushing a lighter box with the same force will result in a larger acceleration. Newton's first law of motion, also known as the law of inertia, states that an object at rest will stay at rest, and an object in motion will continue to move at a constant velocity unless acted upon by a net external force. This means that if the net force on an object is zero, its velocity will not change. For example, a car moving at a constant speed on a straight road will continue to move at that speed unless a net force acts on it, such as friction or a change in direction.  Read the passage carefully before answering the questions that follow. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> What does Newton's second law of motion state? <ol style="list-style-type: none"> Acceleration is directly proportional to net force and inversely proportional to mass. Acceleration is directly proportional to mass and inversely proportional to net force. Acceleration is directly proportional to net force and inversely proportional to mass.
