With Theory of International Politics Kenneth Waltz established Neo realism as a major school of thought in IR which still remains a dominant approach within the discipline in the Anglo American world and beyond Man the State and War his first contribution to the debate in IR and the predecessor to Theory of International Politics received praise for its presentation of a discussion on the causes of international warfare as well as the possibilities of its prevention on three different levels of analysis the individual the state and the international system This book reflects on the arguments presented in Man the State and War from a contemporary perspective Do Waltz s ideas still hold firm ground in the discipline The book alerts to the perceived necessity of combining conceptions of governance and authority with considerations on the reduction of inequality at the individual state and international level Inequality in particular has received increased attention as a cause for violence at all three levels since Waltz published Man the State and War The book also addresses Waltz's rejection of supranationalism as the remedy for war a view that has been challenged since he wrote the book One theme stands out from today's perspective the establishment and maintenance of good global governance can be considered the most important aspect for the prevention of war

Intriligator, Urs Luterbacher, 1994-06-30 Cooperative Models in International Relations Michael D Intriligator and Urs Luterbacher Cooperation problems in international relations research have been associated with a variety of approaches Game theoretical and rational choice perspectives have been used extensively to analyze international conflict at a bilateral two actor level Problems of deterrence and conflict escalation and deterrence maintaining and conflict dilemma solving strategies have been studied with a variety of game theoretical constructs These range from two by two games in normal form Axelrod 1984 to sequential games It is obvious that the analysis of conflict solving strategies and metastrategies deals implicitly and some times explicitly with cooperation The emphasis on cooperation promoting strategies plays therefore an important role within rational choice analysis of two actor problems However problems of international cooperation have also been traditionally associated with literary and qualitative approaches This is especially true for studies carried out at a multilateral or systemic level of analysis The association between cooperation problems at the international level and the study of international organizations influenced by the international legal tradition have certainly contributed to this state of affairs The concept of international regime of cooperation Krasner 1983 which derives itself from legal studies has been developed entirely within the context of this literary specific problems In our case we have a set of three main theories that are concerned with the wide field of international regimes interest based neoliberalism power based neorealism and knowledge based cognitivism Each of those theories has a unique view of international regimes and the phenomena related to them although when looked at closer one notices that they do in fact have several things in common Of these three neoliberalism and neorealism are both rooted in and based on the theory of rational choice that is rationalism Within the boundaries of rationalism however they do preserve their own interpretations of international regimes In this essay we will therefore focus on the converging aspects of neoliberalism and neorealism as well as on their differences Thus in the end it is our goal to show possible ways of how these two rationalistic approaches could be amalgamated so that their advantages may be used in a combined form by future political scientists not ignoring the difficulties that one faces when making such an attempt Democratization in Africa Earl
