Bravo! Tracy D. Terrell,1994 Coastal Resource Management in the Wider Caribbean Yvan Breton,2006 During Phase I results of the project were summarised in individual case studies In Phase II more structured exchanges produced collective writing efforts which gave the study a stronger comparative and analytical orientation In addition to chapters dealing with analytical and methodological issues in coastal management the essence of the volume lies in five comparative and synthesised case studies that focus on particular management problems in diverse social contexts Although this text is written primarily for a research audience it should be of interest to coastal planners decision makers and funding agency representatives because this type of thinking needs to be shared far more widely among these groups in the Caribbean For instance we argue that particular attention should be given to reaching a better balance between natural and social sciences in the management of natural resources Irricab ,1979-07 Agricultural Information Resource Centers ,1990
