ABSTRACT

Crime is a social phenomenon caused by normative deviations that are detrimental and cannot be tolerated. During the COVID-19 pandemic, the crime rate increased by 19.47% which was dominated by conventional crimes. The high crime rate that occurs can cause anxiety and concern in the community. Crime is a manifestation of antisocial behavior which refers to a series of actions outside the norms, rules, and laws that apply in social groups. Individuals with antisocial behavior exhibit impulsive, irritable, aggressive behavior, and are less able to accept social norms. This causes individuals to tend to commit violations continuously. Antisocial behavior usually begins to appear in early adolescence and will decrease in adulthood, especially in young adults. In its development, there are factors that cause individuals to tend to maintain their antisocial behavior, such as (a) economy (poverty and unemployment); (b) culture (juvenile delinquency, moral decadence, and promiscuity); (c) social problems (prostitution, crime, and gambling); and (d) a racist system. This research method uses descriptive quantitative and data is collected using a measuring instrument Subtype of Antisocial Behavior (STAB). Participants in this study consisted of 160 criminal offenders currently serving detention time in Jakarta and Tangerang Sectoral Police Station. The results showed that 44.2% had antisocial behavior in the high category. Participants who had a history of dropping out of school, motives, and individuals with a history of recidivism had higher antisocial behavior scores. Future research is expected to be able to examine participants based on a more specific type of crime.

1. INTRODUCTION

Crime is a social phenomenon that arises due to normative deviation, which is indicated by against law. Criminal acts are detrimental to others, so they cannot be tolerated [8]. Based on statistical data from 2016 to 2018 it is explained that the number of crimes that occurred in Indonesia was 652,466 incidents, where the risk of each experiencing a crime (crime rate) was 113. The higher the crime rate, the higher the level of vulnerability to crime in an area will be [4].

The high crime rate that occurs can cause anxiety and concern in the community. Karopenmas Mabes Polri, Brigjen Pol Argo Yuwono stated that during the COVID-19 pandemic, there was an increase in the crime rate of 19.47% [16]. Combes Pol Ahmad Ramadhan explained that the type of crime that has increased is dominated by conventional crime, or what is commonly referred to as street crime [6].

Forensic psychologists [18] stated that two factors cause individuals to commit criminal acts, (a) personal factors, which consist of biological and psychological factors; and (b) situational factors. In addition, there are risk factors that cause individuals to engage in criminal acts continuously, such as social, family, and psychological experiences, so it is important for researchers to study risk factors and individual development, especially in the early stages of development [7]. The criminological perspective explains the importance of understanding the development of criminals to understand the differences in criminal behavior based on the stage of individual development. Usually, criminal behavior begins in early adolescence and will decline in adulthood. In reality, different facts
