Custom Combining on the Great Plains : a History Isern, Thomas D,1982 The Custom Cutters Thomas Dean Isern,1977 Interstate Custom Combining in the Great Plains in 1971 (Classic Reprint) William F. Lagrone,2018-01-11 Excerpt from Interstate Custom Combining in the Great Plains in 1971 Interstate custom crews came from as far away as California and Florida to harvest in the Great Plains But in terms of number of crews number of combines and acres harvested operators residing in Kansas and Oklahoma accounted for about 60 percent of the total Crews from these two States and Texas and North Dakota harvested more than a million acres each Operators harvested more acreage in their own State than in any other State except for operators residing in Oklahoma Wyoming and other States Oklahoma Operators harvested more grain in Kansas than in Oklahoma Since Kansas had the greatest wheat acreage it attracted custom operators from all Plains States About 88 percent of all interstate combines harvested crops in Kansas About 91 percent of the operators reported they were also farmer ranchers About half earned 50 percent or more of their gross income from custom combining Custom combining is a longstanding profession 65 percent of the operators had 10 or more years of experience Only 6 percent reported combining for less than 2 years Interstate combining is a way of lengthening the season to get maximum use of the highly specialized and expensive equipment The harvesting season lasts 10 to 20 days in any one location but custom combiners were able to extend it to an average of 114 days by moving across State lines Some crews harvested crops nearly year round but the majority started about June 1 and terminated combining before November 1 The us Interstate crews employed workers operating combines in 1971 There were two workers per combine one operator and one truck driver to haul grain The number of combines per crew ranged from 1 to 12 Two combine crews were the most common accounting for 43 percent of all crews and 38 percent of all acreage cut by interstate combiners Interstate operators kept combines an average of 4 years Those harvesting less than acres were kept an average of years while machines cutting over acres were traded at years Over 84 percent of the operators reported full ownership of their combines 8 percent reported a partnership and 7 percent reported arrangements involving two or more operators About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Interstate Custom Combining in the Great Plains in 1971 William F. Lagrone,Earle E. Gavett,1975 Harvesting the High Plains H. Craig Miner,1998 Historian Craig Miner recounts the story of a former field hand whose joint enterprise with Wichita entrepreneur Ray Garvey created an agricultural wheat empire which still operates today Miner details the daily decisions the men made which led to their success as well as treating philosophical and historical questions about the relationship between agriculture and nature in a semi arid region Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR
