

- BASIC APPROACH TO CHILD WITH ANY BEHAVIORAL DISORDER

Background history: Child's early development of the personality and behavior depends upon the environment in which he is raised. Children raised in emotionally supportive, caring and responsive environment are well adjusted. The type of family, school, community, and society has a lot of influence on the overall development of behavior. Hence, it is important to take a detailed history about the place, family, and society when dealing with children having behavior problem.

Assess severity: It is important to find out day-to-day activity of the child and influence on day-to-day activity by this problem, it is also important to assess severity of the problem.

Identify triggers: In order to classify the severity of the problem, it is important to find out the events, nature, duration, frequency and situations that trigger the problem.

Increase appropriate behavior: Interventions that are intended to increase the appropriate behavior use principles of reinforcement and intervention. The reinforcement techniques are social reinforcement (attention, praise), tangible reinforcement (material objects of personal value), and token economy.

Decrease inappropriate behavior: Those used to decrease inappropriate behavior use the principle of punishment. The punishment techniques are extension, time out for positive reinforcement, response cost and overcorrection.

Skill development: Children are helped to develop particular skills. The skill training is encouraged in prosocial activities of children such as sharing toys, waiting for turn, asking for helps. This helps the children for joining in group activities and resolving conflicts. The area of skill training is problem-solving skill, social skills and anger-coping skills.

Loving attitude: Overall, children of growing age with behavior problems should be dealt with supportive, tender, and loving care. Caregiver or nurses should also be great listeners to understand to exact nature of their problems. Nurses should try to solve this problem and counsel the parents and family members, appropriately.

Parent management training: Parents are taught to deal with the children having behavior problems using different techniques such as positive reinforcement for appropriate behavior, how to give effective commands and request and reinforce children compliance. They are also taught how to use response cost and time out techniques following noncompliance or inappropriate behavior.

NURSING RESPONSIBILITIES IN MANAGEMENT OF BEHAVIORAL PROBLEMS OF CHILDREN

Nurses play an important role in prevention, early identification, and management of behavioral problems in children.

- History taking to assess the specific problem and find out the cause of the problem.
- Informing the parents about the causes of problems of the particular child.
