I came to the United States in 1973 because the then Chair of Bacteriology and Immunology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (UNC), the late Philip Manire, did a sabbatical at the Lister Institute in London where I was working on my Ph.D. "What are you going to do when you finish?" he asked. I was one of those students that my current Chair berates for not having thought about life after graduation and had to confess that I didn't really know. I had been working as a research assistant and had more or less assumed that I would keep doing the same thing; no one had suggested anything to the contrary. "Why not come to the States for two years and see what it is like?" he said. "There is someone in my department working on this new virus, Epstein-Barr virus (EBV), maybe you can work with him." It seemed like a good idea, and 42 years later, I am just closing a career working on that "new virus," EBV, and I am still in the US.

EBV appealed to me because I liked immunology, I thought viruses were really interesting, and a virus that infected the immune system seemed to represent an ideal combination for study. In Joe Pagano's lab at UNC, I had pretty much free range in what I did. I was in a supportive environment with wonderful colleagues in what eventually became the Lindeberger Comprehensive Cancer Center. Looking back, it is amazing to me how, even as a very junior postdoc, busy, established investigators would take time to talk with me and discuss ideas. At UNC, I was also encouraged to write grants and got my first chance to fly independently.

That new—actually quite old—virus, EBV, infects just about all of us. We carry it in our B lymphocytes and in our epithelial cells, and generally speaking, it does not seem to do most of us much harm. If we are first infected after the age of about ten or 11, there is a good chance that we will get infectious mononucleosis—temporarily debilitating, but only rarely any worse. A bout of infectious mononucleosis does, however, slightly increase the chance of subsequently developing Hodgkin's lymphoma or multiple sclerosis, and as we age, an enormous part of our immune system is devoted to keeping EBV in check, probably reducing our ability to respond to other pathogens. If you lose immune control of the virus, B cell lymphomas can develop, and such EBV-driven tumors are a scourge of transplant recipients and AIDS patients. More difficult to explain, and the subject of considerable research effort over the years, has been the association of EBV with nasopharyngeal carcinomas, a subset of gastric cancers, and a variety of rarer cancers such as natural killer/T cell lymphomas and leiomyosarcomas. It has been estimated that EBV is responsible for about 200,000 new cases of cancer worldwide, every year.

As my own research on EBV continued, my lab began to focus on the envelope proteins of the virus that allow the virus to attach to a cell, fuse its envelope with the cell membrane, and get inside. After all, no virus can survive or cause disease, including cancer, unless it can penetrate a cell. So we studied virus proteins involved in attachment and entry into its two major targets, B lymphocytes and epithelial cells, and we sought to identify partners on the cell surface

Lets delve into the realm of top-selling books, exploring the engaging narratives that have enthralled audiences this year. The Must-Read : Colleen Hoover's "It Ends with Us" This poignant tale of love, loss, and resilience has gripped readers with its raw and emotional exploration of domestic abuse. Hoover masterfully weaves a story of hope and healing, reminding us that even in the darkest of times, the human spirit can succeed. Uncover the Best : Taylor Jenkins Reid's "The Seven Husbands of Evelyn Hugo" This intriguing historical fiction novel unravels the life of Evelyn Hugo, a Hollywood icon who defies expectations and societal norms to pursue her dreams. Reid's compelling storytelling and compelling characters transport readers to a bygone era, immersing them in a world of glamour, ambition, and self-discovery. Braving The New World : Delia Owens' "Where the Crawdads Sing" This evocative coming-of-age story follows Kya Clark, a young woman who grows up alone in the marshes of North Carolina. Owens spins a tale of resilience, survival, and the transformative power of nature, entrancing readers with its evocative prose and mesmerizing setting. These top-selling novels represent just a fraction of the literary treasures that have emerged in 2023. Whether you seek tales of romance, adventure, or personal growth, the world of literature offers an abundance of captivating stories waiting to be discovered. The novel begins with Richard Papen, a bright but troubled young man, arriving at Hampden College. Richard is immediately drawn to the group of students who call themselves the Classics Club. The club is led by Henry Winter, a brilliant and charismatic young man. Henry is obsessed with Greek mythology and philosophy, and he quickly draws Richard into his world. The other members of the Classics Club are equally as fascinating. Bunny Corcoran is a wealthy and spoiled young man who is always looking for a good time. Charles Tavis is a quiet and reserved young man who is deeply in love with Henry. Camilla Macaulay is a beautiful and intelligent young woman who is drawn to the power and danger of the Classics Club. The students are all deeply in love with Morrow, and they are willing to do anything to please him. Morrow is a complex and mysterious figure, and he seems to be manipulating the students for his own purposes. As the students become more involved with Morrow, they begin to commit increasingly dangerous acts. The Secret History is an exceptional and thrilling novel that will keep you wondering until the very end. The novel is a warning tale about the dangers of obsession and the power of evil.
