

BREACH OF PROMISE TO MARRY

It is very commonsensical that in any case of breach that the question of whether there was contract in the first place must be asked. Once that is settled, then, the breach of it can be the bone of contention. This is to say, before a suit of breach of promise to marry can be successful, there must have been mutual assent between the two capacitated adults.

Hence, any person, male or female who can prove that their lover jilts them after promising to marry them is defaulted and are entitled to damages from defaulting party [lover].
