Better to walk ...

This proverb tells us that the Tuareg have a nomadic lifestyle (see Background information below). They think that being on the move is positive and that not moving is a waste of time.

In life, it is always possible to ...

This proverb suggests that the Tuareg are a peaceful people – they seek to reach agreement with others; it suggests they are a trading people – this is the sort of belief system that merchants have, for example, that it's always possible to negotiate a deal.

Acquiring things ...

This proverb may be interpreted as meaning that possessions are of no importance to the Tuareg – they are not materialistic. It may also reflect their nomadic lifestyle – if you wander in the desert, taking too many things with you can slow you down, which could be a problem.

- 1 Speaker 1: not to try to change other people or you can't change other people
 Speaker 2: not getting too attached to things or you shouldn't get too attached to things
 2 Speaker 1: The speaker got frustrated with his business partner (Gales), who always took ages to make a first design for the customer, and this was driving him (the speaker) crazy.
 Speaker 2: The speaker's house was flooded.
 3 A Tuareg person would probably agree with the lesson from Speaker 2 because the Tuareg don't like to get attached to unnecessary material objects (third quote in Exercise 1).

1 Example answer

We are often told to learn from our mistakes. Roosevelt cleverly and amusingly turns the commonplace quote around. It's good advice because if we consider what mistakes other people make, we are less likely to make them ourselves. However, it isn't easy to follow because we don't necessarily see or understand that people have made mistakes and we often want to go our own way in life.
