1.1. Basic Computer Concepts

A computer is a programmable machine designed to perform arithmetic and logical operations automatically and sequentially on the input given by the user and gives the desired output after processing. Computer components are divided into two major categories namely hardware and software. Hardware is the machine itself and its connected devices such as monitor, keyboard, mouse etc. Software are the set of programs that make use of hardware for performing various functions. It allows the user to store all sorts of information and then 'process' that information, or data, or carry out actions with the information, such as calculating numbers or organising words. Computer: A machine that can receive and store information and change or process it. A computer allows users to store and process information quickly and automatically.

A computer is an electronic device that accepts data from the user, processes it, produces results, displays them to the users, and stores the results for future usage.

Data is a collection of unorganized facts & figures and does not provide any further information regarding patterns, context, etc. Hence data means "unstructured facts and figures".

Information is a structured data i.e., organized meaningful and processed data. To process the data and convert into information, a computer is used

1.2. History and Evolutions of Computers

Computers and electronics play an enormous role in today's society, impacting everything from communication and medicine to science.
