

MASTERY LEARNING

Mastery-based learning requires students to demonstrate a specific level of knowledge or skill (mastery) before moving forward.

EXPLANATION

- In compulsory education, teachers often need to teach content, test students, give a grade, then move on.
- Mastery learning challenges this model, arguing that students need to be given time to pause, repeat, and master one concept before moving onto the next.

EXAMPLES

- Setting Minimum Grades: Identify a threshold for mastery, such as 90% on a test. Students cannot move on until they have achieved that threshold.
- Giving Extra Time: If students don't pass, they get extra time and support to level-up to mastery.
