This means that if you know the mass of an object and the force applied to it, you can calculate its acceleration. For example, if you know the mass of a car and the force of the engine, you can calculate how fast the car will accelerate. This is why a heavier car will accelerate more slowly than a lighter car when the same force is applied. Newton's second law also tells us that if the net force on an object is zero, the object will not accelerate. This means that if the forces acting on an object are balanced, the object will continue to move at a constant velocity. For example, if a car is moving at a constant speed on a straight road, the forces of friction and the engine are balanced, so the car does not accelerate. Newton's second law also tells us that if the net force on an object is not zero, the object will accelerate. This means that if the forces acting on an object are unbalanced, the object will change its velocity. For example, if a car is moving at a constant speed and you press the gas pedal, the net force is no longer zero, so the car will accelerate.  Answer the questions below for each question. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> What does Newton's second law of motion state? <ol style="list-style-type: none"> Force is equal to mass times acceleration. Force is equal to mass times velocity. Force is equal to mass times distance. Force is equal to mass times time.
