

The basic methods for corrosion control and corrosion protection:

1. Corrosion Protection by Coating:

- The major protective coatings applied to structural steelwork are paints, metal coatings and combinations of both.
- The protection methods can be divided into three categories like applying organic or inorganic coatings, controlling electrode potential to make metal immune or passive by adding alloying elements in steels to promote formation of passive layer and addition of corrosion inhibitors to the environment

a) Passive Rust Coatings :

- Passivity is due to the presence of a thin film which isolates the metal surface from a corrosive aqueous environment

b) Organic Coatings:

- Organic coatings used on steel provide an effective barrier protection by isolating steel from the attacking species.
