Habitability and Cosmic Catastrophes Arnold Hanslmeier, 2008-11-14 The search for life in the universe is one of the most challenging topics of science It is not a modern topic at all since more than 100 years ago it was speculated that on the Moon there are oceans and seas on Venus there are swamps and also Mars is inhabited However now we have the scientific background and the scientific tools to answer this question and it is also certain that the answer would have deep implications for our culture philosophy and religions If we find that life has developed on other planets or satellites of giant planets then this would be the natural breakdown of our central position in the universe But is life a widespread phenomenon How vulnerable is it to changing conditions and even catastrophic events These topics will be discussed in this book If life is in the extreme case a unique phenomenon found only on planet Earth which seems to be highly unrealistic then also it is important to discuss how it is adaptable to changing external conditions Can we survive a cosmic catastrophe How do these catastrophes change habitability Which forms of life are more vulnerable It was mentioned that now science has made great progress to answer such questions Let us give some examples In modern biology in connection with organic chemistry the origin of life is studied
