INCANTATIONS

Incantations are ancient canticles of faith, differentiating from sorceries in that they require words to be uttered when performed. Generally, people of faith such as clerics and paladins will be the ones to use incantations, but there are more ancient ways still, such as druids, who pull forth the power of the crucible, and warlocks, who call upon higher powers such as dragon communion.

Since incantations in Elden Ring use both the equivalent of a holy symbol and verbal components, but the Lands Between does not have a concept of material components in the same way 5e does. Because of this, material components will either not be listed or be listed as (a holy symbol).

CONDITIONS

Certain incantations apply conditions, all of which are listed below. Elden Ring status effects such as sleep, bleed, and poison have been converted over to work without needing conditions.

DEATHBLIGHT

Some creatures and objects can cause a special condition called deathblight. Deathblight is measured in six levels. An effect can give a creature one or more levels of deathblight, specified in the effect's description.

Deathblight levels have no effect until a creature has 6 levels, at which point it dies.

If a creature with a level of deathblight suffers another effect that causes deathblight, its current level of deathblight increases by the amount specified in the effect's description.

Finishing a long or short rest removes all deathblight levels from a creature.

FRENZIED MADNESS

Some creatures and objects can cause a special condition called frenzied madness. Frenzied madness is measured in three levels. An effect can give a creature one or more levels of frenzied madness, specified in the effect's description.

Frenzied madness levels have no effect until a creature has 3 levels. When a creature gains its third level, it takes psychic damage equal to $1d12 +$ its level or CR (whichever is applicable), and if it has spell slots, its highest level spell slot is expended. Additionally, it is stunned until the end of its next turn. After suffering these effects, the creature loses all its levels of frenzied madness.

If a creature with a level of frenzied madness suffers another effect that causes frenzied madness, its current level of frenzied madness increases by the amount specified in the effect's description.

Finishing a long or short rest removes all frenzied madness levels from a creature.

FROSTBITTEN

- A frostbitten creature's speed is halved.
- The creature can take its action or bonus action, but not both.
- Regardless of the creature's abilities or magic items, it can't make more than one melee or ranged attack during its turn.
- If the creature takes fire damage, the condition ends.

SCARLET ROT

- A creature that starts its turn with Scarlet Rot takes necrotic damage equal to its proficiency bonus.

IMMUNITY

Non-humanoid creatures are usually immune to Frenzied Madness and Deathblight, and creatures with resistance or immunity to cold damage are usually immune to being frostbitten.
