Cotswolds North & South Tracy Sabin,2022-03 The Cotswolds which cover an 800 square mile area in the southern heart of England can be visited by car via two grand loops one to the north and one to the south This book illustrates this approach with maps of each loop indicating possible village stops along the way Each map is followed by short photo essays of individual villages revealing their unique character and topography What links the villages together are the honey colored Cotswold limestone walls and the slate or thatched roofs Forest field and stream are left to be their beautiful natural selves The building materials come from the earth and develop over time a rustic patina of lichen and moss that coexist graciously with the lush landscape
