Prevention of Maladjustment to Life Course Transitions Moshe Israelashvili,2023-06-01 This book provides a comprehensive and updated review of the concepts models and interventions related to the process of adjustment to life course transitions In times of transition an individual is exposed to experiences that require them to assume new roles and exhibit updated behaviors Regardless of the characteristics of these transitions exposure to normative trajectories imposes on the person an intensive engagement in a process of re adjustment Sometimes this demand is beyond the scope of one s ability motivation or comprehension Hence some people might ineffectively perceive and or react to the change and end up feeling unable to handle the change and inclined to escape the situation A preventive intervention that either reduces the impact of possible risk factors or fosters possible protective factors would support the people in managing the transition While the importance of prevention of maladjustment is repeatedly mentioned in the literature this is the first known book on how to prevent maladjustment It examines how the sense of transition emerges what adjustment means the models that elaborate on how people manage in times of transition what the antecedents of maladjustment are and especially how maladjustment could be prevented Out of these discussions a new model The Transitional Stress and Adjustment TSA Model is suggested as a grand framework for paving a way forward to better prevent people s maladjustment to life course transitions Prevention of Maladjustment to Life Course Transitions is a much needed cornerstone in the future development within the prevention science framework This book has interdisciplinary appeal for researchers practitioners and graduate students in psychology sociology public health social work criminology medicine health sciences public policy economics and education who consider prevention an important vehicle of intervention to promote health and wellbeing Its focus on the topic of adjustment also would be of special interest to those who explore child and youth development

How Parties Experience Mediation Timea Tallodi,2019-10-22 This book presents an unprecedented qualitative research study on relational changes in mediation with a truly interdisciplinary outset drawing on the literature on psychology alternative dispute resolution and business Mediation s potential to induce changes in parties relationships as an advantage of the process is commonly mentioned in the literature However despite its being a key to reconciliation relational changes in mediation has not yet been a topic of foundational and fine grained qualitative enquiry As the first study in the literature this research uses in depth interviews with mediation parties and the qualitative methodology of interpretative phenomenological analysis in order to explore participants lived experiences The phenomenological stance ensures a particularly rich data set and a nuanced interpretative analysis This pioneering piece of research seeks to enter mediation parties true experiences as closely as possible moving beyond pre existing theoretical quantitative and large scale qualitative explorations The themes are discussed in the context of theory research and practice Therefore this book advances knowledge about mediation both in theoretical and practical terms Innovative conclusions and recommendations are provided for developing mediation practice mediation training programmes and further research

Word-of-Mouth: Influences on the choice of Recommendation Sources Klaus Schöfer,2001-05-16 Inhaltsangabe Abstract The idea of understanding consumer behaviour as a sequential decision making process is one that is common in marketing The decision making process itself is presented as a logical flow of activities working from problem recognition to purchase to post purchase evaluation This decision making process is affected by a number of other more complex influences Some of these influences relate to the wider environment in which the decision is being made while others relate to the individual who makes the decision In this context one of the most widely accepted notions in consumer behavior is that word of mouth communication hereafter WOM plays an important role in shaping consumers attitudes and behaviors More specifically WOM communications between consumers are a topic of interest in both the pre purchase and post purchase decision making literature Research into the diffusion of innovations has focused on modelling the role of WOM in product adoption at various stages of the diffusion process WOM has also been studied as a mechanism through which consumers convey both informational and normative influences in the product evaluation Finally WOM has been identified as an important post purchase complaining option Although WOM plays an important role in consumer pre purchase and post purchase decision making research into this phenomenon has been fragmented Importantly relatively little attention has been directed at understanding key issues with respect to WOM recommendation sources and the factors that influence their use The aim of the present work is to add to this small body of empirical research The main part of this paper is divided into two chapters Chapter 2 that follows an introduction to the work is a theoretical one It is a review of the literature on consumer decision making and the individual and environmental influences on it Emphasis is being placed on WOM communication and its role in understanding consumer behaviour Chapter 3 focuses on the choice of WOM recommendation sources Empirical research is presented which explores the influences on the choice over WOM recommendation sources Finally concluding remarks and recommendations for further research can be found in chapter 4 Inhaltsverzeichnis Table of Contents Chapter 1 Introduction1 Chapter 2 Literature Review3 2 1Consumer Decision Making3 2 1 1The Decision Making Process4 2 1 1 1Problem
