Approaches To Peacebuilding:

Approaches to Peacebuilding H. Jeong, 2002-08-11 Ho Won Jeong and a cast of experts explore the ways in which the dynamics of post conflict situations can be transformed to sustainable peace Contributors focus on designs and models of peacebuilding functions of peacekeeping capacity building through negotiations reconciliation the role of gender in social reconstruction and policy coordination among different components of peacebuilding The analysis illustrates past and current experiences of peacebuilding and suggests conceptual and policy approaches that can overcome the weaknesses of existing strategies

Approaches to Peacebuilding Ho-Won Jeong, 2002

Positive Approaches to Peacebuilding Cynthia Sampson, Mohammed Abu-Nimer, Claudia Liebler, 2009-10-30 In a highly readable fashion this text combines theory and case studies domestic and international experiences and advocacy of innovative approaches to peacebuilding along with appropriate caution against simplistic application of these practices

Practical Approaches to Peacebuilding Pamina Firchow, Harry Anastasiou, 2016 This well balanced volume approaches peacebuilding from a variety of important geographical and theoretical directions It is a valuable asset for anyone looking for a comprehensive view of the subject Karl DeRouen University of Alabama What is sustainable peacebuilding And what is the relationship between empirical realities and theoretical approaches to the subject The authors of Practical Approaches to Peacebuilding present a series of case studies from around the world to explore how various peacebuilding theories engage and interact with lived experiences and also to elaborate useful new theoretical perspectives Pamina Firchow is assistant professor of conflict analysis and resolution at George Mason University s School for Conflict Analysis and Resolution Harry Anastasiou is professor of international peace and conflict studies and director of the Conflict Resolution Program at Portland State University

Conflict Management and Peacebuilding Necla Tschirgi, 2011 The field of conflict management continues to expand as the sources and nature of contemporary conflicts change in varied ways New actors newly emerging issue areas and novel approaches challenge established paradigms It is becoming increasingly difficult to define the scope and parameters of the field At the macro level intra state conflicts constitute one of the greatest areas of concern for scholars and practitioners alike There is a rapidly growing body of knowledge and practice that now fall under the expanded rubric of conflict prevention conflict resolution conflict management and peacebuilding Despite this rapid growth two nagging problems persist The first relates to the continued absence of voices from conflict affected countries The field remains largely dominated by Northerners more accurately male Northern scholars and practitioners and thereby exhibits certain serious mental blinders The second which is inevitably linked to the first relates to the continuing disconnect between local and international approaches to conflict management and peacebuilding While making a strong plea for more systematic and concerted efforts to support the development of the field of conflict management and peacebuilding in the South this paper will focus on the gap between local and international approaches to conflict management and peacebuilding The paper is part of ongoing research on local perspectives on peacebuilding For the Istanbul conference the paper will specifically address the difficulties involved in aligning local and international approaches to conflict management and peacebuilding It will be based upon the rich body of literature on international peacebuilding as well as selected case studies from Africa the Balkans and Central Asia that examine local perspectives on peacebuilding In addition the paper will review the recent policy discourse by international actors especially the United Nations and donor governments on local ownership of continuing gap between rhetoric and reality Ongoing research indicates that there are important areas where local and international approaches to peacebuilding tend to diverge Six key areas include

- 1 Conflict Analysis International actors often bring a standard analytical template and a limited understanding of any given country which contribute to underestimating the deep rooted social cultural and historical dimensions of a conflict Conversely local actors are often too close to the conflict to see it in its totality or in a larger comparative perspective
- 2 Mapping of Conflict Actors An accurate mapping of conflict actors their motives interests and strategies is essential to peacemaking and peacebuilding Yet research suggests that internal and external actors have different perceptions of the most relevant actors and their roles as connectors dividers or spoilers With the burgeoning literature on regional conflict formations and transnational threats the role of external actors including the UN IFIs and aid donors as critical players in local conflicts is increasingly being recognized
- 3 Assessing Local Capacities for Peace Multiple case studies suggest that external ctors approach local capacity building from a perspective of capacity deficits Many needs assessment frameworks start with an analysis of gaps limitations and weaknesses On the other hand local actors view conflict management peacebuilding through an assessment of existing assets including indigenous authority structures local elites religious leaders people s voices and civil society which are often not visible to international actors who tend to deal primarily with government authorities or selected national counterparts
- 4 Identifying Peacebuilding Priorities While there is consensus that security is a rerequisite for sustainable peace external and internal actors differ as to the timing and sequencing of peacebuilding priorities including the trade off between competing issues such as employment and poverty alleviation before liberalization stabilization before democracy justice before reconciliation
- 5 Prioritizing Local Ownership There is strong evidence that despite their declared commitment to local ownership external approaches to peacebuilding crowd out or replace local capacities and local level initiatives Yet there are divergent views at the local level as to what constitutes local ownership
- 6 Time Frame for Peacebuilding Perhaps the sharpest difference between internal and external perspectives on peacebuilding revolves around the essential time frame External actors are often guided by artificial timelines linked to UN mandates donor frameworks and project funding cycles while local actors view peace in generational terms These are only some the most common and consistent findings that are emerging from an initial analysis of selected case studies from Africa the Balkans and Central Asia However they provide important insights into why there needs to be a deeper investigation of the persistent gaps between local and international approaches to conflict management and peacebuilding especially if international actors are serious about enhancing local ownership One area that merits special attention is a comparative analysis of the conflict management strategies and mechanisms employed by different internal actors at the local sub national and national levels What is becoming evident is that there is little knowledge of the different conflict management and peacebuilding efforts undertaken at multiple levels by numerous domestic actors and the extent to which they contribute to a larger national strategy which then becomes the foundation for a stronger alignment between national and international approaches However deeper understanding of national and local level processes and mechanisms would require strengthening of the field of conflict management in the South as well as the increased participation of Southern academics and practitioners from conflict affected countries in long term research alongside their Northern counterparts

Peacebuilding Paradigms Henry F. Carey,2020-12-17 Peacebuilding Paradigms focuses on how seven paradigms from the Comparative Politics International Relations and Policy Analysis subfields Realism Liberalism Constructivism Cosmopolitanism Critical Theories Locality and Policy analyze peacebuilding The contributors explore the arguments of each paradigm and then compare and contrast them This book suggests that a hybrid approach that incorporates useful insights from each of these paradigms best explains how and why peacebuilding projects and policies succeed in some cases fail in others and provide lessons learned Rather than merely using a theoretical approach the authors use case studies to demonstrate why a focus on just one paradigm alone as an explanatory model is insufficient This collection directly at how peacebuilding theory affects peacebuilding policies and provides recommendations for best practices for future peacebuilding missions The Ethics of Peacebuilding Timothy Murithi,2009 Key Features
