1

February 11, 2022

It's February and for the season for tax-related news, we won't be doling out any relationship advice this year (this is an IT blog after all), but we do wholeheartedly recommend that you commit to multifactor authentication (MFA). It doesn't matter if your employees are working remotely across the country or if they've been in office every day for the past 10 years. Multifactor authentication is now a business necessity that goes a long way to secure your infrastructure and financial information.
