

Understanding children's rights

ENQUIRE

Everybody has rights, including children.

Rights make sure we are all treated fairly and can reach our full potential.

Children have additional rights to adults. This is because children need extra protection and don't always have the independence adults do.

Children's rights are set out in an international human rights treaty called the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (or the UNCRC for short).

The UNCRC sets out over 40 rights for anyone under the age of 18. These rights are called 'articles' and say things like:

Scotland signed up to the UNCRC in 1991. The Scottish Government are committed to making the UNCRC part of Scottish law where both government and public authorities have a duty to uphold it.

- Children should not be discriminated against.
- Children have a right to life.
- Children can have a say in the things that affect them.
- Children have a right to be listened to.
- Children have a right to play and to express themselves.
- The decisions made about children should be in their best interests.
