Chinese Characteristics Arthur H. Smith, 1894      Chinese Characteristics Arthur H. Smith, 2018-04

Chinese Characteristics 1894 was the most widely read American work on China until Pearl Buck's The Good Earth 1931. It was the first to take up the task of analyzing Chinese society in the light of scientific social and racial theory. Written as a series of pungent and sometimes comic essays for a Shanghai newspaper in the late 1880s, Chinese Characteristics was among the five most read books on China among foreigners living in China as late as World War I and it was read by Americans at home as a wise and authentic handbook. The book was quickly translated into Japanese and just as quickly into Chinese. It was accepted by the Chinese and has maintained its authoritative status for over a century as the quintessential portrait of the Chinese race drawn by a Westerner. Lu Xun, the most prominent Chinese cultural critic of the early twentieth century, urged his students to study and ponder Smith's message, which was very widely debated in Chinese student circles. Within the 1990s, two different new translations of Smith's book were published in China and both editions have enjoyed wide distribution and readership. In the West, particularly since World War II, Chinese Characteristics has been widely quoted though seldom read as a purported example of Sino-myopia and Orientalism. Despite such Western pseudo-intellectual bias, Smith's arguments retain the power to provoke critical introspection among Chinese and for the honest among Westerners as well.

Arthur Henderson Smith 1845-1932 spent 54 years as a missionary in China. During his residence there he wrote a series of books which interpreted China to foreign readers: Chinese Characteristics, Village Life in China, and The Uplift of China.

Book Review: Chinese Characteristics 1894 was the most widely read American work on China until Pearl Buck's The Good Earth 1931. It was the first to take up the task of analyzing Chinese society in the light of scientific social and racial theory. Lydia Liu, Professor of Columbia University, Book Introduction: Chinese Characteristics was written by a highly observant American missionary, Smith. He has lived over fifty years in China. This book was published firstly in 1890 in China, presents the social life and personal character traits of the typical Chinese. In this illustration edition, nearly 100 old photos are added, aiming to let readers understand China more directly and truthfully. Lu Xun, the most prominent Chinese cultural critic of the early twentieth century, urged his students to study and ponder Smith's idea, which was widely debated in Chinese student circles.

This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1894 edition. Excerpt: CHAPTER XVIII CONTENT AND CHEERFULNESS WE have already seen that the capacity of the Chinese to bear the ills they have is a wonderful and to us in most cases an incomprehensible talent which has well been called a psychological paradox. Notwithstanding their apparently hopeless condition they do not appear to lose hope or rather they seem to struggle on without it and often against it. We do not perceive among them that restlessness which characterises the people of most other nations especially towards the close of the nineteenth century They do not cherish plans which seem to them to lead ultimately to a good time coming and they do not appear to suppose that there is any such time to be expected But the terms patience and perseverance by no means cover the whole field of the Chinese virtues in this direction We must also take account of their quietness of mind in conditions often very unfavourable to it and of that chronic state of good spirits which we designate by the term cheerfulness Our main object is to call attention to the existence of such virtues yet we may perhaps be able incidentally to suggest certain considerations which in part help to account for them By the term contentedness we do not mean to imply that any individual in China is satisfied with what he possesses in such a way and to such a degree that he does not wish to better his condition The contentedness of the Chinese as we have seen in speaking of their conservatism is most conspicuously seen when we consider the system under which they live That system they do not wish to change That this is the temper of the great mass of the Chinese we have no doubt whatever It is a mode of viewing the phenomena of life which we designate

Sen who was a physician not only failed to democratise China but also produced a permanent dictatorship in China In addition his allegation that China is different from the rest of the world is not substantiated by logic any amendment which is based upon a misunderstanding of the original concept is logically false regardless of who is the originator of the amendment
