Digital Sensations:

Race and the Senses Sachi Sekimoto, Christopher Brown, 2020-06-08 In Race and the Senses Sachi Sekimoto and Christopher Brown explore the sensorial and phenomenological materiality of race as it is felt and sensed by the racialized subjects. Situating the lived body as an active affective and sensing participant in racialized realities, they argue that race is not simply marked on our bodies but rather felt and registered through our senses. They illuminate the sensorial landscape of the racialized world by combining the scholarship in sensory studies, phenomenology, and intercultural communication. Each chapter elaborates on the felt bodily sensations of race, racism, and racialization that illuminate how somatic labor plays a significant role in the construction of racialized relations of sensing. Their thought-provoking theorizing about the relationship between race and the senses includes race as a sensory assemblage, the phenomenology of the racialized face and tongue, kinesthetic feelings of blackness, as well as the possibility of cross-racial empathy. Race is not merely socially constructed but multisensorially assembled, engaged, and experienced. Grounded in the authors' experiences, one as a Japanese woman living in the USA and the other as an African American man from Chicago, Race and the Senses is a book about how we feel the racialized world into being.

The Senses of Touch Mark Paterson, 2020-06-07 Touch is the first sense to develop in the womb, yet often it is overlooked. The Senses of Touch examines the role of touching and feeling as part of the fabric of everyday embodied experience. How can we think about touch? Problems of touch and tactility run as a continuous thread in philosophy, psychology, medical writing, and representations in art from Ancient Greece to the present day. Picking through some of these threads, the book feels its way towards writing and thinking about touch as both sensory and affective experience. Taking a broadly phenomenological framework that traces tactility from Aristotle through the Enlightenment to the present day, the book examines the role of touch across a range of experiences, including aesthetics, digital design, visual impairment, and touch therapies. The Senses of Touch thereby demonstrates the varieties of sensory experience and explores the diverse range of our senses of touch.

Digital Sensations Ken Hillis,1999 Virtual reality is a technological reproduction of the process of perceiving the real yet that process is filtered through the social realities and embedded cultural assumptions about human bodies and space held by the technology s creators Digital Sensations looks closely at how the lived world is affected by representational forms generated by communication technologies especially digital and optical virtual technologies Through critical histories of the technologies of vision light space and embodiment Ken Hillis traces the often contradictory intellectual and metaphysical impulses behind the Western transcendental wish to achieve an ever more perfect copy of the real He advocates that current and proposed virtual technologies reflect a Western desire to escape the body Because virtual technologies are new these histories also address unintended and underconsidered consequences flowing from their rapid dissemination such as commodification and the alienation of new forms of surveillance Book cover
