Bartleby, the Scrivener (□□□□□) Herman Melville, 2011-10-15 At the period just preceding the advent of Bartleby I had two persons as copyists in my employment and a promising lad as an office boy First Turkey second Nippers third Ginger Nut These may seem names the like of which are not usually found in the Directory In truth they were nicknames mutually conferred upon each other by my three clerks and were deemed expressive of their respective persons or characters

Bartleby, the Scrivener a Story of Wall-Street Herman Melville, 2016-05-23 Bartleby the Scrivener explores the theme of isolation in American life and the workplace through actual physical loneliness and mental loneliness Although all of the characters at the office are related by being co workers Bartleby is the only one whose name is known to us and seems serious as the rest of characters have odd nicknames such as Nippers or Turkey this excludes him from being normal in the workplace Bartleby's former job was at the Dead Letter Office that received mail with nowhere to go representing the isolation of communication that Bartleby had at both places of work being that he was given a separate work area for himself at the lawyer's office Bartleby never leaves the office but repeats what he does all day long copying staring and repeating his famous words of I would prefer not to leading readers to have another image of the repetition that leads to isolation on Wall Street and the American workplace

HERMAN MELVILLE *Bartleby, The Scrivener Annotated Herman Melville, 2021-04-04 This story in its most basic stripped down form is a simple one a successful lawyer in need of assistance hires a new scrivener a kind of human Xerox machine to join his small firm Enter Bartleby a quiet initially efficient anti social little man Bartleby proceeds to work well as a copyist but refuses to help out with any other office tasks or rather he simply prefers not to The lawyer and his other employees are shocked but Bartleby just won't do what they ask Bartleby is always in the office either working or staring out the window at a facing wall and it turns out that he actually lives in the office Eventually this refusal grows more bizarre when Bartleby announces that he will no longer work as a copyist but prefers simply to stay in the office and not do any work Finally he is firmly asked to leave but he just doesn't Rather than take any more drastic measures to get Bartleby out of his office the lawyer actually picks up and moves his practice elsewhere Another practice moves into the building only to discover that Bartleby is still a fixture there The new occupants complain to the Narrator but he tells them the truth Bartleby isn't his responsibility At the end of their rope the new occupants have the police arrest Bartleby The story concludes with Bartleby in prison He prefers not to do anything there either and even prefers not to eat The Narrator goes to visit Bartleby but unsurprisingly he can't get through to the strange scrivener Eventually Bartleby wastes away and starves to death leaving only the Narrator to mourn him As a rather odd end note the narrator informs us that Bartleby previously worked as a clerk in an obscure branch of the Post Office known as the Dead Letter Office sorting through undeliverable mail We have to wonder what kind of effect these dead letters must have had on his psyche But still Bartleby is a mystery left unsolved

Bartleby, the Scrivener Herman Melville, 2006 By the American novelist essayist and poet widely esteemed as one of the most important figures in American literature and best remembered today for his masterpiece Moby Dick 1851 His short story Bartleby the Scrivener 1856 is among his most important pieces and has been considered a precursor to Existentialist and Absurdist literature

Bartleby, the Scrivener Herman Melville, 2010-02 Bartleby the Scrivener was written by Herman Melville in 1853 two years after Moby Dick had been published and his writing career was beginning to lose its luster Subtitled A Story of Wall Street the book is a seemingly simple story about a lawyer who hires a gentleman named Bartleby as a scrivener in his office In those long ago days before copy machines scriveners had the tedious job of hand copying documents sometimes over and over Bartleby was good at the copying part of his job but when asked to proofread aloud one day he simply replied I prefer not to From that moment forward he used the phrase I prefer not to for every task requested of him eventually preferring not to do any work whatsoever The lawyer who is astounded by Bartleby's attitude tells the story in the first person The story is rich in language and yet spare in actual action The reader is forced to think and think seriously about the choices we make daily Bartleby chose to rebel and become an anti hero But the real protagonist of the story is the lawyer who is drawn into Bartleby's power and grows to admire him The conclusion is sad but inevitable The story of Bartleby is simply about a man losing his will to live It is intended to show the reader a dark side in all of us when the meaning of our existence is allowed to be challenged The chilling image of Bartleby in his previous job at the Dead Letter Office and the fact that Melville left Bartleby's reason for being or not being a mystery all adds to the intrigue of Bartleby the Scrivener First published anonymously Putnam's Monthly Magazine Bartleby the Scrivener reflects Melville's own pessimism at the time

Bartleby, the Scrivener Herman Melville, 2020-09-08 Bartleby the Scrivener A Story of Wall Street by Herman Melville The narrator a casual business elderly lawyer helps wealthy men deal with mortgages deeds and bonds telling the story of the strangest man he has ever known Bartleby as a new addition to the narrator's office The narrator has two staff Nippers and Turkey The claws suffer from dyspepsia and Turkey is drunk But the office survived because in the morning Turkey was sane even though the claws were frustrated and in the afternoon the claws calmed down even though Turkey was drunk Bartleby answers questions about the ad and the narrator hires a naive young man in hopes that his calmness will soothe the moods of other writers One day when Bartleby was asked to proofread one of the papers he had copied he simply replied I don't want to marks the first of many rejections To the disappointment of the speaker and the frustration of the other employees Bartleby was involved in fewer and fewer duties in the office The narrator tries to reason with Bartleby several times and learns about him But Bartleby always responds the same way when asked to work or to provide information about himself I don't want to On weekends when a speaker stops in the office he finds Bartleby lives at the office The stillness of Bartleby's life leaves the narrator at night and Sundays as desolate as a deserted city He alternates between pity and disgust for Bartleby's bizarre behavior Bartleby continued to deny his duties until eventually he was inactive But the narrator was unable to get him out The scavenger has bizarre powers over his employer and the narrator feels he can't do anything to hurt this homeless man. But his business peers become suspicious that Bartleby has turned up at the office as he is not at work and the threat of a shattered reputation leads the narrator to do something. His attempts to get Bartleby away were in vain. Therefore the speaker moved the office to a new location. But shortly thereafter a new tenant of the narrator's old office came to him for help. Bartleby would not leave. When they drove him out of the office, Bartleby haunted the corridors. The narrator meets Bartleby in a final attempt to reason with him. But Bartleby rejected him. Fear of disturbing the anti-Bartleby group, the narrator did not have to work for a few days. When he returned, he learned that Bartleby had been taken to prison. At the prison, Bartleby appears to be fatter than usual. The friendliness of the speaker was rejected. The narrator offers a one-stop bribe to make sure Bartleby gets well fed. But when the narrator returned a few days later, Bartleby died; he didn't like to eat. Shortly after, the narrator heard rumors that Bartleby was working in the dead letter office. The narrator reflected that the dead letter would plunge everyone in Bartleby's mood into a darker darkness. The letters represent our death and the failure of our best intentions. Through Bartleby, the narrator sees the world as the miserable writer must have seen it. The closing words of the story are the narrator resigns and sighs in pain: "Ah Bartleby! man!"

Bartleby, the Scrivener Herman Melville, 2020-04-06 I am a rather elderly man. The nature of my avocations for the last thirty years has brought me into more than ordinary contact with what would seem an interesting and somewhat singular set of men of whom, as yet, nothing that I know of has ever been written. I mean the law copyists or scriveners. I have known very many of them professionally and privately and if I pleased could relate divers histories at which good-natured gentlemen might smile and sentimental souls might weep. But I waive the biographies of all other scriveners for a few passages in the life of Bartleby, who was a scrivener of the strangest I ever saw or heard of. While of other law copyists I might write the complete life of Bartleby, nothing of that sort can be done. I believe that no materials exist for a full and satisfactory biography of this man. It is an irreparable loss to literature. Bartleby was one of those beings of whom nothing is ascertainable except from the original sources and in his case those are very small. What my own astonished eyes saw of Bartleby that is all I know of him except indeed one vague report which will appear in the sequel.

BARTLEBY, the SCRIVENER. (Annotated): a STORY of WALL-STREET Herman Melville, 2021-05-05 This story in its most basic stripped-down form is a simple one: a successful lawyer in need of assistance hires a new scrivener, a kind of human Xerox machine, to join his small firm. Enter Bartleby, a quiet, initially efficient, anti-social little man. Bartleby proceeds to work well as a copyist but refuses to help out with any other office tasks or rather he simply prefers not to. The lawyer and his other employees are shocked but Bartleby just won't do what they ask. Bartleby is always in the office, either working or staring out the window at a facing wall, and it turns out that he actually lives in the office. Eventually, this refusal grows more bizarre when Bartleby announces that he will no longer work as a copyist but prefers simply to stay in the office and not do any work. Finally, he is firmly asked to leave but he just doesn't. Rather than take any more drastic measures to get Bartleby out of his office the lawyer actually picks up and moves his practice elsewhere Another practice moves into the building only to discover that Bartleby is still a fixture there The new occupants complain to the Narrator but he tells them the truth Bartleby isn't his responsibility At the end of their rope the new occupants have the police arrest Bartleby The story concludes with Bartleby in prison He prefers not to do anything there either and even prefers not to eat The Narrator goes to visit Bartleby but unsurprisingly he can't get through to the strange scrivener Eventually Bartleby wastes away and starves to death leaving only the Narrator to mourn him As a rather odd end note the narrator informs us that Bartleby previously worked as a clerk in an obscure branch of the Post Office known as the Dead Letter Office sorting through undeliverable mail We have to wonder what kind of effect these dead letters must have had on his psyche But still Bartleby is a mystery left unsolved
