When a net force acts on an object, the object's motion will change. This means that the object's speed or direction will change. However, if the net force is zero, the object's motion will not change. This means that the object's speed and direction will remain the same. This is called Newton's first law of motion. Another way that forces can cause an object to change its motion is by changing its acceleration. Acceleration is the rate of change of velocity. If a net force acts on an object, the object's acceleration will change. This means that the object's speed or direction will change. This is called Newton's second law of motion. Forces can also cause an object to change its motion by changing its velocity. Velocity is a vector quantity that describes the speed and direction of an object's motion. If a net force acts on an object, the object's velocity will change. This means that the object's speed or direction will change.
