On the political economy of plant disease epidemics J.C. Zadoks, 2023-08-28 Food security has been and always will be a human concern Food security has always been fragile threatened by a variety of factors including plant disease epidemics Several plant disease epidemics of the past lead to questions like What happened How did people deal with these epidemics What were the social and political consequences This volume deals with such questions in six selected chapters Chapter 1 discusses black stem rust of wheat in antiquity and how its epidemics were perceived by the ancients Chapter 2 reconstructs a forgotten epidemic of yellow stripe rust 1846 on rye a staple food in Continental Europe Chapter 3 describes the epidemics of potato late blight in Continental Europe 1844-46 that caused the Continental Famine and in the longer reach contributed to the European revolutions of 1848 Chapter 4 studies the impact of plant disease on the food situation in the neutral Netherlands during World War I Chapter 5 looks at belligerent Germany during World War I ravaged by plant disease Chapter 6 treats the problem of under rating and over estimating the effect of plant diseases on the course of history the effects of ergot on political events in Russia 1722 and in France 1779 of black stem rust on wheat on the Russian Famine 1932 3 and of rice brown spot on the Bengal Famine 1943 This publication is of interest to plant pathologists historians economists and sociologists interested in history and with a focus on food Baren op Beveland Otto W. Hoogerhuis,2003 The study describes on a micro level the development of infant mortality during the period 1811 1900 in Goes a small market town and four neighbouring villages This research is based on family reconstitution data The analyses show that infant feeding practices were the most important determinants of fertility and mortality levels followed by the season in which children were born This study shows that women were likely to cease breastfeeding during the months between span class GramE July to October The increasing demand for women s time by agricultural activities especially during the harvest season and in the summer months caused the absence of the mother in the family span class GramE Which led to inferior food for the infants and to an increase of infant mortality rate High temperatures in hot summers also raised the mortality rate Exploration of the relationship between fertility and mortality at the micro level further showed that the probability of conception during the first year following giving birth was greater when the infant died than when the infant survived The evidence of replacing children who had died casts new light on this apparent change in the balance between fertility and infant mortality in the middle of the nineteenth century Migrant Labour in Europe, 1600-1900 Jan Lucassen,2022-11-16 Migrant Labour in Europe 1987 examines the movement of workers from less prosperous parts of Europe to areas with demand for their services The author identifies seven major systems of migrant labour the North Sea System mainly Westphalian workers heading for the German and Dutch North Sea Coast and Walloon French workers bound for the Belgian and Zeeland coasts the area between London and the Humber the Paris Basin Provence Languedoc and Catalonia Castile Piedmont and central Italy with Corsica A detailed study of the first of these systems tracing its development and changes is brought into a synchronic relation with data for the other regions The evidence shows major waves of immigration in the seventeenth century and a rapid diminution of migratory labour to the North Sea in the last quarter of the nineteenth century a time when new pull areas were created by the expanding industrial complexes of Germany and labour began to come in from areas outside Europe International Bibliography of Book Reviews of Scholarly Literature Chiefly in the Fields of Arts and Humanities and the Social Sciences ,2004 The Rise and Decline of Dutch Technological Leadership (2 Vols) Karel Davids,2008-08-31 Technological leadership is an important topic in economic history and the history of technology This book addresses the issue of technological leadership by means of an in depth study on the Dutch Republic once described as the first modern economy Drawing on extensive research in archives in Europe and a vast amount of printed sources and secondary literature it provides a wide ranging overview of Dutch technological leadership in the early modern Europe it explains whence this leadership came about and why it ended and it explores to what extent the Dutch case illuminates the evolution of technological leadership in general

L. van Zanden, 1985 De ontwikkeling van de agrarische produktie en produktiviteit is gemeten en verklaard aan de hand van theorieën van moderne economische groei veroorzaakt door specialisatie en technische veranderingen en van traditionele economische groei veroorzaakt door de bevolkingstoename Speciale aandacht is besteed aan het oosten van Nederland waar een vorm van boereneconomie zich in een moderne marktgerichte landbouw omvormde De relatie tussen de modernisatie van de agrarische sector en de veranderingen in de sociale structuur worden geanalyseerd waaruit blijkt dat er na 1880 een verband was tussen een snelle economische groei en een vooruitgang in gelijkheid cum laude graduation with distinction
