

THE BATTLE OF MIDWAY

18 minutes

1942

Color

Midway was the pivotal battle for the American forces fighting in the Pacific against the Japanese. It was also the first battle filmed in color. Opening with the amusing antics of the gooney birds, the island's only native inhabitants, the film shifts quickly to the June dawn alarm. Subsequent scenes show the action at sea and the tracking down of the remaining Japanese fleet. A must-see for World War II fans.

GLOBAL WAR

28 minutes

1965

Black & White

In an objective, unsentimental manner this film documents the Army's wartime efforts in 1943. Detailed are scenes of Patton's Seventh Army as it marches through Sicily and then up the spine of Italy under General Mark Clark, where it encounters stiff resistance by German troops. Also highlighted is the collapse of Mussolini, and events in the Pacific theater.

Brigadier General Stanley M. Ulanoff is a noted military historian who has received numerous honors and commendations from both the U.S. and French governments. During World War II he served with the Counter-intelligence Corps in Europe.
