

Abortion II
(Lecture Outline)
Professor Duncan

Marquis: the question to ask yourself- the problem with killing is ultimately it robs people of that future. Why is he doing what he's doing if you disagree with him. He still asks you to answer the question: why killing is wrong?

Without thinking like a philosopher, you take the buffet route:

When you push people on where the right to life comes from results in a divine command theory or natural law. They argue that it comes from some extra being of reason. Either being natural reason or God. We don't like the implications that derive from those, so we go shopping for other ethical answers. In this we start to become psudeo-kantians who want clear rules to ethics.

If we can't answer marquis question, we look for other answers.

Marqui keeps the door open for euthanasia for people who have lost the chance to have a future. If you cant have a future you its ok?

I. The Wrong of Abortion (Patrick Lee and Robert George)

More traditional pro-life argument that may have the most familiarity.

A. When is a human being "complete"?

Complete is different for a philosopher vs a regular person

I. 23 + 23= 1 (something unique and fully encoded)

23 chromosomes from both has created something fully and completely unique. The uniqueness of each and every one of us. Of the billions who have lived before and after us we will have been the only one who have ever been us. This leads to the sacredness of each and every human being. The creation of one of those human persons, for them biologically speaking the only thing that that person needs to become a full person is fully there.

You still need nourishment from the mother and a place to survive as you develop. But we are talking about all of the things that will ultimately produce you. Your physical being will change in the next 9 months and then again rapidly as you grow and then again as you age.

a. Internally directed toward its own survival and maturation

Its hard for us to picture that fetus as having some sort of intentionality. The fetus-eats, sleeps, it is on some level by nature persuing its own desire to survive. To the extent that it matures and is directing its way towards being a human being.

b. Barring violence or disease the organism will become a mature human being

c. Not extrinsically determined
