Death by Bread Alone

"Man does not live by bread alone." In fact, bread alone kills us. To live by bread alone is to die a slow and dreadful death in which all human relationships are mutilated and strangled. Of course, such a death by bread alone does not mean that we cease to exist. Our bodies still function. We still go about the chores and routines of life; we accomplish things; we breathe; we produce and consume and excrete; we come, go, and speak. Yet we do not really live. In Samuel Beckett's play Happy Days there is a character by the name of Winnie, a woman of about fifty. In the first act Winnie is buried in sand up to her waist; nonetheless she chatters away, brushes her teeth, rummages about in her handbag, and feels sorry for her husband. In the second act she is buried up to her chin and can no longer move her head. All relationships are severed, but that stream of life character, in which she takes herself so seriously, flows on and on. That is a kind of death; that is what hell is like, being buried in sand, unable to change things and yet without pain, content to while away the time. "Abandon hope all ye who enter here"; this is the living death by bread alone.

Death by bread alone means being alone and then wanting to be left alone; being friendless, yet distrusting and despising
