

What happens to your body when you die?

Seconds after death:

The body cools down until room temperature is reached. This is called algor mortis.

Brain activity slows down and then gradually stops.

Minutes after death:

The process of putrefaction kicks in – the body begins to rot and decay.

Cells start to die due to a lack of oxygen.

Hours after death:

The body releases the remaining urine and faeces.

Gravity pulls the blood down and the body changes colour. White patches appear.

Days after death:

Rigor mortis (tightening of muscles) sets in.

Weeks after death:

The body starts to smell as the chemical cadaverine is released.

Bugs such as maggots start to eat you. They can eat 60% of your body within the first week.

A month after death, the hair, nails and teeth will fall out.

Months after death:
Most of the internal organs have become liquid. They will swell and the body will burst.

Eventually only the skeleton will be left.
