Biologists believe that environmental influences modify genetic inheritance. They also believe that many behaviors are determined by a combination of inheritance and environmental influences. In fact, a combination of both is almost always the case. For example, a child's intelligence is determined by both genetic inheritance and environmental influences. The child's intelligence is determined by the child's genetic inheritance and the child's environment. The child's intelligence is determined by the child's genetic inheritance and the child's environment.

Biologists believe that both genetic inheritance and environment play a role in determining a person's intelligence.
