Four basic assumptions underlie GAAP

- The economic entity assumption presumes that economic events can be identified specifically with an economic entity
- The going concern assumption anticipates that a business entity will continue to operate indefinitely
- The periodicity assumption allows the life of a company to be divided into artificial time periods to provide timely information
- The monetary unit used in U.S. financial statements is the U.S. dollar

Debt to Equity ratio= All liabilities/all shareholders equity || Long-term solvency refers to the: Risk that a company will not be able to pay its long-term debt.

Liquidity- the ability in which a company can turn an asset into cash.

GAAP currently employs a "mixed attribute" measurement model.

1. Historical cost - original transaction value adjusted for depreciation and amortization
2. Net realizable value - the amount of cash into which an asset is expected to be converted in the ordinary course of business
3. Current cost - the cost that would be incurred to purchase or reproduce the asset
4. Present (or discounted) value of future cash flows
5. Fair value (current market value) - the price that would be received to sell assets or paid to transfer a liability in an orderly transaction between market participants at the measurement date
 - Market approach: valuation based on market info
 - Income approach: estimate a future amount and then mathematically converts those amounts to a single present value
 - Cost approach: estimates the amount that would be required to buy or construct an asset of similar quality and condition

Level 1: Quoted market prices in active markets for identical assets or liabilities.

Level 2: Inputs other than quoted prices that are observable for the asset or liability. These inputs include quoted prices for similar assets or liabilities in active or inactive markets and inputs that are derived principally from or corroborated by observable market data.

Level 3: Unobservable inputs that reflect the entity's own assumptions about the assumptions market participants would use in pricing the asset or liability developed on the best information available on the circumstances.

Fair value option: GAAP gives a company the option to choose whether to report financial assets and liabilities at fair value

- For companies to reduce volatility in reported earnings; helps to converge with international acctg standards
- Full-disclosure principle: requires that reports should include any info that could affect decisions made by external users
 - Parenthetical comment/stipulating comments

 - Supplemental schedules and tables

Objective of financial reporting: provide financial info that is useful to investors, lenders + other creditors
