This volume is an important contribution to our understanding of culture and alcohol in the United States Its appearance is also a milestone in the history of alcohol studies in American anthropology Over the last six years the volume s editors initially along with Miriam Rodin have served as the coorganizers of the Alcohol and Drug Study Group of the American Anthropological Association AAA In this capacity they have organized sessions at the AAA and other meetings greatly strengthened the research network with a regular and informative newsletter and painstakingly promoted the publication of anthropological work on al cohohol and drugs Appearing just as the responsibility for the Study Group is passed on to others this book is a fitting emblem of the care and energy with which its editors have built an institutional nexus for alcohol and drug anthropology in North America The contents of this volume offer a uniquely wide sampling of the diversity of cultural patterns that make up the American experience with alcohol The collective portrait the editors have assembled extends in several dimensions through time and history across such social differ entiations as gender age grade and social class and through such major social institutions as the church and the family Clearly the dominant dimension of variation in the material that follows however is ethnicity The book offers us a sampler of unprecedented richness of the different experiences with alcohol of American ethnoreligious groups

The Course of Alcoholism, Four Years After Treatment J. Michael Polich,David J. Armor,Harriet B. Braiker,1980 Traces longitudinal patterns of alcohol related problems and alcoholic remission over four years A sample of 922 male alcoholics was assessed at the time of admission to treatment and at several followup points at four years the data included interviews and validating information for survivors and official causes of death for those deceased The analysis identifies factors associated with remission relapse and alcohol related death over the four year period Patterns of psychological functioning and social adjustment are also examined and related to drinking behavior Methodological analyses assess the validity of self reports and the extent of potential bias due to nonresponse Results show that although about half of the cohort was in remission at four years remissions were generally intermittent rather than stable over long periods of time

Recent Developments in Alcoholism Marc Galanter,2013-11-22 From the President of the Research Society on Alcoholism In recent years increasingly convincing evidence in support of a biobehavioral conceptual model of the etiology of alcoholism has emerged In this model the disorder is perceived as arising from the interaction of genetic/biological vulnerability and psychosocial risk Drinking or alcohol seeking is a metric trait Alcoholism which is a state of abnormally intense alcohol seeking behavior that over time leads to the alcohol dependence syndrome lies at the extreme high end of this quantitative measure Metric traits are influenced by multiple genes the extent of genetic loading of biological risk for alcoholism would be different in different individuals Added to this kind of variability is the wide range of options for exposure to the psychosocial risk factors of heavy drinking provided by modern society Further environmental provocation also changes when life events change It is not surprising therefore from the combination of the kinds of genetic and environmental variability described above that there is a wide array of patterns of expression of the disorder alcoholism referred to by some as alcoholisms In the search for understanding of underlying mechanisms and rational bases for potential therapy it is important to focus our attention on the final common pathway of this disorder alcohol seeking behavior This series ever since its beginning in 1983 has been sensitive to the complexities of the interaction between biological and psychosocial risk factors in alcoholism

Alcohol and Drug Problems in Women Oriana Josseau Kalant,1980-12-31 Over the last decade the world has experienced a growing interest in problems associated with the nonmedical use of drugs This interest has corresponded to a real growth in the extent diversity and social impact of the use of alcohol and drugs in many societies As a result the amount of research and writing on the subject of drug problems has greatly increased and it has become very difficult for one individual to keep up with all the relevant literature There is thus an acute need in the field for critical reviews that assess current developments and the present series is intended to fill this need The series is not to be an annual review in the usual sense The aim is not to cover all the work reported during the preceding year in relation to a fixed selection of topics Rather it is to present each year evaluative papers on topics in which enough recent progress has been made to alter the general scope in a particular area Owing to the multidisciplinary nature of problems of drug use and dependence the papers published in each volume will be drawn from several disciplines However some volumes may be devoted to one particular problem with individual reviews and papers examining various aspects of it The composition of the editorial board and the international advisory board reflects these objectives The editors are members of the senior scientific staff of the Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario
