Development Perspectives for the 1990s Renee Prendergast,1991      Development Perspectives for the 1990s H.W. Singer,Renee Prendergast,2016-07-27 The most pressing problem for most developing countries is how to reverse the adverse trends of the 1980s and create the conditions for sustainable development The contributors to this volume bring a great variety of experience background and interest to bear on this issue Considerable attention is given to the design of appropriate structural adjustment programmes and the role of debt reduction food aid and the European Community in this context The need for an adaptive evolutionary approach to problems of development is perhaps the central theme to the Industrial Policy in Eastern Europe J.M. Van Brabant,2012-12-06 This volume in essence continues my recent contributions towards building up a better understanding of the wide range of obstacles besetting the transitions away from administrative planning in the former communist regimes in the eastern part of Europe It is self contained however As such it specifically addresses issues revolving around how best to govern economies and indeed societies more generally that are undergoing fundamental structural transfor mation and whether industrial policy can facilitate progressing with the vexing transformations that will have to be enacted over a protracted period of time Because of the bewildering variety of hindrances that the managers of the transition have been confronted with many of which were not even contem plated when the programs were first designed regaining a measure of good governance including notably good economic governance is critical in formu lating a positive pOlitical economy of transition Arguably most critical is steering the processes of destruction and creation not creative destruction in the Schumpeterian sense In some cases this requires reallocating decom missioned resources both capital and labor to new activities Changing rules on the utilization of existing assets is evidently at the core of what the transi tion towards market based economic systems should be all about Very often however this requires establishing new economic activities from domestic and foreign savings      Report of the Director, Quadrennial 1990-1993,
