Working in English Heather Murray, 1996 This is an analysis of English studies in higher education addressed in particular to practitioners in the field teachers and students As Heather Murray states in her introduction those who work in English are likely to have a stronger sense of critical history than of disciplinary history She contends that in order to understand and reform the discipline of English studies it is necessary to shift the focus of examination down and back to look at ordinary and often taken for granted disciplinary practices such as pedagogy and to extend the historical frame Murray begins with an examination of some important historical moments in the development of the discipline in Canada the appointment in 1889 of W J Alexander as first professor of English at the University of Toronto the twenty five year experiment early in this century in rhetorical and dramatic education for women that the Margaret Eaton School of Literature and Expression represented and the entry of theory into the English Canadian academy The second section examines some of the common features and routines of English departments such as curriculum design seminar groups tests and assignments essay questions and the conference in order to establish the critical political principles that underpin study and teaching in the academy today In this section Murray also focuses on the role of women as students and teachers of English The final section surveys the literature available for further research on the discipline and for constructing a history of English studies in Canada aspirations of India's educated urban elite is often fundamental. Yet some of the most basic questions about English literary studies in India: their relevance and validity, their social functions, their institutional contexts, their pedagogic and publishing practices, are never posed. The seventeen essays in this volume break the silence and ask why. This volume will be invaluable to those interested in sociology, history, colonialism and culture, and to all who teach or study English literature anywhere in the world.

Word Frequencies in Written and Spoken English Geoffrey Leech, Paul Rayson, Andrew (All Of Lancaster University) Wilson, 2014-06-11

Word Frequencies in Written and Spoken English is a landmark volume in the development of vocabulary frequency studies. Whereas previous books have in general given frequency information about the written language only, this book provides information on both speech and writing. It not only gives information about the language as a whole but also about the differences between spoken and written English and between different spoken and written varieties of the language. The frequencies are derived from a wide-ranging and up-to-date corpus of English, the British National Corpus, which was compiled from over 4,000 written texts and spoken transcriptions representing the present-day language in the UK. The book is based on a new version of the corpus available from 2001, providing more accurate grammatical information which is essential, for example, for distinguishing words like leaves (noun and leaves verb) with different meanings. The book begins with a general introduction explaining why such information is important and highlighting interesting linguistic findings that emerge from the statistical analysis of the British National Corpus vocabulary. It also contains twenty-four interest boxes which highlight and comment on different aspects of frequency, for example, the most common colour words in English in order of frequency and a comparison of male words (e.g. man) and female words (e.g. woman) in terms of their frequency.
