

General relativity

From the world learned of the revolutionary Special Theory of Relativity proposed by Albert Einstein and published in 1905, physics underwent its most revolutionary change since the days of Isaac Newton. Nevertheless, Einstein had yet another surprise left: the so-called General Theory of Relativity, of 1916—a much more complex and complete theory from which several interesting predictions arise and have been confirmed over time.

Why a second theory?

According to Einstein, the laws of physics are the same for all observers, but the way they are perceived is different. Einstein's theory of relativity is a generalization of Newton's theory of gravity, which is only valid in the case of weak gravitational fields. Einstein solved the problem of providing an theory by providing an equivalent principle.

A deformed universe

Einstein established that gravity was not a force, but rather the consequence of the deformation of space-time that any body with mass generates. Mass, when approaching a planet, for example, an object is not attracted by any force, but it travels through that curved deformation.

The most fundamental principle of general relativity is that the laws of physics are the same for all observers.

Light that bends

Perhaps the most surprising confirmation of one of Einstein's predictions, based on the General Theory of Relativity, happened in 1919 during the course of a solar eclipse.

According to the general theory of relativity, the path of light is curved by the presence of mass. This was confirmed during the solar eclipse of 1919, when the light from the stars was observed to be deflected by the Sun's gravity.

In 1919, the British astronomer Arthur Eddington led an expedition to observe the solar eclipse of May 29, 1919. He measured the deflection of starlight by the Sun's gravity, which confirmed Einstein's theory.

4 dimensions

For the universe according to Einstein's theory, although the space is three-dimensional, time is the fourth dimension, which, like space, is curved.

Gravitational lenses

Another prediction based on the General Theory of Relativity concerns gravitational lenses. Because of the distortions, which is also related to the gravitational deformation caused by gravity, the image of certain far stars and galaxies is distorted when seen from the Earth.

The image that is produced by the lens is distorted and magnified. This is because the light rays are bent by the gravity of the lens.

ALBERT EINSTEIN

The most revolutionary prediction that the theory made was that the light from a distant star would be deflected by the gravity of the Sun. This was confirmed during the solar eclipse of 1919. Einstein's theory of relativity is a generalization of Newton's theory of gravity, which is only valid in the case of weak gravitational fields. Einstein solved the problem of providing an theory by providing an equivalent principle.

Electromagnetic waves

Einstein proposed that an intense gravitational field could produce the deflection of waves, in other words, this would make them lose energy. Because waves "stretch" when being moving about it, they become matter, this effect, which occurs in reality, is the Shapiro time delay.

Perturbation of Mercury's orbit

Astronomers had discovered a discrepancy in the orbital motion of the planet Mercury that could not be explained by Newton's or classical physics without including some hypothetical planet. Einstein used his theory to explain the discrepancy, obtaining the solution of the anomaly about.
