Borderline personality disorder BPD is characterized by a recurring long standing pattern of having unstable relationships with others whether they be romantic relationships friendships children or relationships with family members The condition is marked by an effort to avoid abandonment regardless of whether it s real or simply imagined and impulsivity in decision making People with borderline personality disorder often swing from one emotion to another easily and quickly and their self image changes just as often If there s an overarching defining characteristic of someone who suffers from borderline personality disorder it s that they often seem like they are ping ponging back and forth between everything in their life Relationships emotions and self image change as often as the weather usually in reaction to something happening around them such as stress bad news or a perceived slight They rarely feel satisfaction or happiness in life are often bored and filled with feelings of emptiness Because of these feelings many people with BPD make a suicide attempt or contemplate suicide regularly Suicidal thoughts are common and can lead some people to make a plan or try and carry out suicide Therefore assessment of suicide and suicidal intent is regularly conducted The term borderline means in between one thing and another Originally this term was used when the clinician was unsure of the correct diagnosis because the client manifested a mixture of neurotic and psychotic symptoms Many clinicians thought of these clients as being on the border between neurotic and psychotic and thus the term borderline came into use The term borderline has sometimes been used in a number of ways in society that are quite different from the formal diagnostic criteria for borderline personality disorder BPD In some circles borderline is still used as a catch all diagnosis for individuals who are hard to diagnose or is interpreted as meaning nearly psychotic despite a lack of empirical support for this conceptualization of the disorder Additionally with the recent popularity of borderline as a diagnostic category and the reputation of these clients as being difficult to treat borderline is often used as a generic label for difficult clients or as a reason or excuse for a patient s psychotherapy going badly It is one of the most stigmatized mental disorders even among mental health professionals Review of General Psychiatry, Fifth Edition Howard H.
