

Pebbles

PLACE/GEOGRAPHY/MAP 1

My earliest memories of the coast are on the west. Fleetwood, Morecambe, and mostly Silecroft near Millom. Sand dunes, sharp grasses, grey seas and wind. Always wind. Cold and unforgiving.

Later in my childhood we holidayed on the other coast near Craster. Here there was less sand. Instead sharp sandstone rocks plunged into the water. My memories are clearer, but the impact less. Though perhaps it strengthened my preference for bleak coasts over the welcoming.

MUSIC/SOUND 1

My parents listened largely to music of the folk revival, blues, and other related sounds. The starker the sound the more I liked it. The Watersons, Peter Bellamy, Martin Carthy, Leadbelly.

To get a glimpse of how the music affected me, listen to Martin Carthy singing Long Lankin*. I heard this song of a mysterious threat, of a home invaded, of murder and the killing of a baby long before I was ten. And there is no accompaniment except some echo to dull the song's blade.

At times I've found pebbles and similar objects calming. Turned in the hand. Sometimes, fleetingly, imbued with the magic of a mood or moment. One of those talismans around the age of eight or nine was a red plastic heart.

I don't even remember the reason I found it significant, but I remember that it was significant, and I remember how it felt in my palm. More so than any subsequent pebble.

ILLNESS 1 (PLACE/SOUND 1.5)

Somewhere between the ages of five and eight I was ill with measles. For what felt like a long time I was adrift in a dark empty space.

Sometimes I was huge, white and smooth, and voices came to me only as faint whispers, right at the edge of audibility. Then abruptly I was in the centre of a town. I was tiny, a scratchy, angular ant. The mayor and townspeople bustled around, discussing me in deafening voices that grazed my sides.

And for how long? Weeks? Days? I hung between these two states in a shapeless, lightless void. It remains a terrifying experience, though the full extent of the dread has long since faded.

ILLNESS 2

A tale of two depressions. First the work that supported me through university becoming too stressful in the year after. And second, gradually coming apart after returning from three months in China.

During the first I self harmed. I also, unwisely, used music to exacerbate and intensify my moods. There's a fine line between comfort in something that shows you you're not alone, and in using that thing to amplify or justify destructive behaviours. Here it was the Manic Street Preachers' The Holy Bible.

During the second I experienced near-psychotic symptoms from the initial medication, which thankfully went away after it was changed. And throughout I desperately wanted it not to be happening.

Here I clung to three records that helped me feel a little less out of control. The Chocolate Monk compilation Fug Gum, the Peter Brötzmann/Han Bennink
