

Securing the Connected Home: Addressing IoT Privacy and Security Challenges with Comprehensive Strategies

Abstract:

The paper focuses on the security and privacy concerns of Internet of Things (IoT) -based smart homes, which have numerous advantages but also raise significant security and privacy concerns. These concerns stem from the sensitivity of the data collected, the heterogeneity of application components, dynamic communication patterns, and limited resources. The study aims to increase knowledge, keep pace with development, and contribute to solving these problems by studying research, studies, articles, and references that address these concerns.

The methodology of this study consists of three stages: systematic review of relevant studies, designing an evaluation model for security solutions, and proposing a security solution that addresses these concerns. The third phase proposes a security solution that consists of security tools, protocols, and procedures in a multi-layered architecture implemented in the middleware operating environment. This solution offers advantages that are missing from many other solutions proposed in previous studies, such as interoperability and scalability. The study aims to contribute to the development of integrated solutions to address these security and privacy concerns in smart home applications based on the Internet of Things.

Keywords: IoT, security, privacy concerns, security solutions, heterogeneity, interoperability, scalability

1. Introduction

1.1 preface:

• What is the meaning of Internet of Things (IoT)?

The IoT refers to the billions of objects and physical devices, around us that are now connected to the internet, all collecting and sharing data. Thanks to the arrival of super-cheap computer chips and the ubiquity of wireless networks, it's possible to turn anything, from something as small as a ring to something as big as an airplane, into a part of the IoT [1]. Connecting up all these different objects and adding sensors to them adds a level of digital intelligence to devices that would be otherwise dumb, enabling them to communicate real-time data without involving a human being. The IoT is making the fabric of the world around us smarter and more responsive, merging the digital and physical universes.

• Smart Home based on IoT

"Smart home Term " is used to define internet-connected home systems that intelligent and automate the things homeowners will use every day. They may improve energy economy, security, comfort, and style, all from a single device[2].
