

COMPUTER BUYING GUIDE

When buying a computer, you should consider the type of work you will be doing. For example, if you need a lot of memory, you should look for a computer with at least 640K of RAM. If you need a lot of storage space, you should look for a computer with at least 10MB of hard disk space.

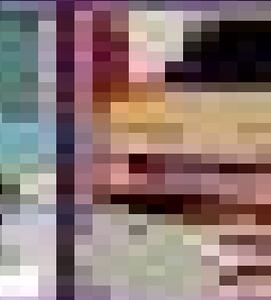

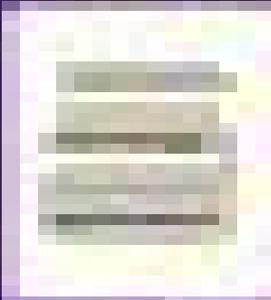

You should also consider the type of operating system you will be using. If you are using a DOS-based system, you should look for a computer with a hard disk that is formatted in FAT16. If you are using a Windows-based system, you should look for a computer with a hard disk that is formatted in FAT32.

Another important factor to consider is the type of processor you will be using. If you are using a Pentium-based system, you should look for a computer with a Pentium 486 or Pentium 586 processor. If you are using a 386-based system, you should look for a computer with a 386 or 486 processor.

Finally, you should consider the type of graphics card you will be using. If you are using a VGA-based system, you should look for a computer with a VGA graphics card. If you are using a SVGA-based system, you should look for a computer with a SVGA graphics card.

By following these guidelines, you can ensure that you are buying a computer that meets your needs and budget. Remember to always compare prices and features before making a purchase.
