Implementation of Information Technology in Business Process Re-engineering Joseph Asamoah, 1998 Business Process Reengineering BPR is a management technique that has taken hold during the past decade BPR as a concept offers what is apparently a more modern approach to reinvesting both public and private organisations However the knowledge derived from many BPR advocates and consultant experiences is incomplete In many cases what is known has not been empirically validated Consequently many companies are wrestling with issues and seeking insight and guidance in implementing and resolving BPR related issues Numerous authors have presented supportive and opposing arguments concerning BPR's success in increasing organisational efficiency and effectiveness However research in this area continues to evolve This case study examines some of the most important causes of success and failure of BPR implementation projects Information technology IT is emphasised as one of the most important systems in the interface that occurs between BPR and other operating organisational elements The prevalence of client server systems and more recently network centric computer systems have led to increased use in BPR projects primarily as technology enablers Given the importance of technology as enablers the primary focus of this study is concerned with the overall effect of BPR implementation on organisations Specifically what factors contribute and inhibit success
