Business Survey Methods:

Designing and Conducting Business Surveys Ger Snijkers, Gustav Haraldsen, Jacqui Jones, Diane Willimack, 2013-07-01
Designing and Conducting Business Surveys provides a coherent overview of the business survey process from start to finish. It uniquely integrates an understanding of how businesses operate, a total survey error approach to data quality that focuses specifically on business surveys, and sound project management principles. The book brings together what is currently known about planning, designing, and conducting business surveys with producing and disseminating statistics or other research results from the collected data. This knowledge draws upon a variety of disciplines such as survey methodology, organizational sciences, sociology, psychology, and statistical methods. The contents of the book formulate a comprehensive guide to scholarly material previously dispersed among books, journal articles, and conference papers. This book provides guidelines that will help the reader make educated trade-off decisions that minimize survey errors, costs, and response burden while being attentive to survey data quality. Major topics include: Determining the survey content considering user needs, the business context, and total survey quality; Planning the survey as a project; Sampling frames, procedures, and methods; Questionnaire design and testing for self-administered, paper, web, and mixed mode surveys; Survey communication design to obtain responses and facilitate the business response process; Conducting and managing the survey using paradata and project management tools; Data processing including capture, editing, and imputation, and dissemination of statistical outputs. Designing and Conducting Business Surveys is an indispensable resource for anyone involved in designing and/or conducting business or organizational surveys at statistical institutes, central banks, survey organizations, etc., producing statistics or other research results from business surveys at universities, research organizations, etc., or using data produced from business surveys. The book also lays a foundation for new areas of research in business surveys.

This volume brings together a selection of papers presented at the 2017 European Establishment Statistics Workshop which have been revised and expanded here. Several contributions will serve to deepen the reader's understanding of the unit problem in business statistics, while further chapters showcase recent advances in business survey methodology and practice in areas such as linking and data integration, sampling, and estimation, data collection from businesses, measurement, and mitigation of response burden in business surveys, among others. Written by leading experts in business statistics, the volume offers detailed and up-to-date findings to survey methodologists and practitioners working with business statistics It will also be useful for readers in official statistics academia and the private sector Statistical Methods Used in the Business Surveys of Statistics Sweden (notes from a Visit to Statistics Sweden - November 1989) Mike A. Hidiroglou,1990 During my two weeks at Statistics Sweden from November 20 to December 1 1989 I gave 10 seminars on methodological aspects of the Business Survey Redesign Project at Statistics Canada as well as the core methodology used in the Generalized Survey Function Development which included sampling and estimation data capture statistical editing and imputation I familiarized myself with the organization of two methodology groups at Statistics Sweden and met with a number of their methodologists to discuss common statistical problems The following notes are a summary of my activities and observations Summary A Quality Approach to Business Surveys Patricia Whitridge,1999 Over the last few years Statistics Canada has initiated a project that will ultimately affect all major economic surveys One of the long term objectives is to be able to present an integrated product for our users The surveys are being unified to use the same sampling frame an integrated sampling and estimation strategy as well as common collection and processing systems As part of the initiative efforts are being made to gather sufficient meta data to enable us to evaluate the quality of all processes as well as to make some judgements about the quality of the final data As well Statistics Canada has started a Data Quality Survey collecting information from existing business surveys about their methodology from frame to estimation Dealing with Non-response in Business Surveys M. A. Hidiroglou,Lyne Guertin,1991 The purpose of this paper is to provide some discussion of the non response problems in business surveys They are somewhat different from those that are found in household surveys Page 1 Methods of Integrated Sampling for Sub-annual Business Surveys Mike A. Hidiroglou,1990 Problems and Methods of the Sample Survey of Business Morris Howard Hansen, The application of recent advances in sampling methods to the problem of measuring for example retail sales and changes in retail sales by kinds of business now makes it possible to improve the quality of the current survey work being done in the business field by the Bureau of the Census The revision of the survey methods will be carried out in connection with the expansion of this work now planned The revision and expansion of the survey involves designing a sample of retail stores that will produce a reliable national estimates of total retail sales and of month to month changes in sales by kind of business and b similar figures with somewhat less precision for individual large cities and subsequently for regions and individual States In this paper we shall consider primarily the design of the sample to meet the first of these objectives The extension of the sample to provide statistics for individual cities and for other areas will be made in such a way as to further improve the general sample but these methods will not be discussed further Sample Size Determination and Allocation for Business Surveys M.
